OUTLINE

Two negro prisoners taken from Birmingham to M[illegible] for trial for assaulting several white girls were taken from the train yesterday and quietly hanged; the mob boarded the train, wearing white masks and took the sheriff's pistol away from him——There is evident friction in Cuba, thousands of insurgents refusing to disarm or disperse unless President Palma's volunteers are also disarmed and dispersed; Governor Magoon and Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Bacon left Washington yesterday for Havana——In the international automobile race on Long Island yesterday for the Vanderbilt cup, Louis Wagner won, breaking the record with a speed of a mile within less than a minute; during the race one man was killed and many were injured——The Pocahontas Collieries Co., states that the bodies of all the miners lost in the mine explosion October 3, have been recovered; the total number of dead is 35——At Philadelphia yesterday the North Carolina University football team was defeated 11 to 0 by the University of Pennsylvania——At Charlottesville, Va., yesterday the University of Virginia and the Raleigh A. & M. tied in a no-score game——The cruiser North Carolina was successfully launched at Newport News yesterday—The transport Sumner arrived in Havana last night with 900 troops——New York markets: Money on call nominal, time loans dull and steady; spot cotton 30 points lower, closing quiet at 10.80; flour dull and lower; wheat easy, No. 2 red, 77 1-2 elevator; corn easy, No. 2, 54 1-2 elevator; oats mixed, 37 1-2; turpentine quiet, 67 to 67 1-2; rosin firm, strained common to good, 4.20.

What do the New York Republicans think of being bosed by Senator Platt when it turns out that his wife has bossed him to such an extent that he is about to take to the woods.

Some people in Texas accuse Senator Bailey of being a corporation man because he received a whopping big fee for his legal services. Doubtless the corporation puts Bailey in the anti-corporation class for squeezing it for a fee that made it wince.

The Washington Post remarks: "The John B. Good who obtained a marriage license in Omaha last week will find it necessary to live right up to his name hereafter if he hopes to keep out of trouble." The question, however, is will John Be Good?

The Republicans of New York probably will have as a campaign slogan "Remember Maine." In so remembering they will fight shy of making President Roosevelt the issue, for fear that issue might get a frost like it did in Maine.

A seat on the New York Stock Exchange sold the other day at $92,000. It is just like a woman to think that a man who would pay that much for a seat is a fool when he could save his trading stamps and get a comfortable rocking chair for nothing.

The doctors now say that the Sultan of Turkey cannot live longer than six months. From all acounts he will leave enough widows at his harem to cause a shortage of mourning hats in the millnery establishments of Constantinople.

A Cleveland doctor says it is all nonsense to believe that there is any real danger in kissing. A Baltimore man who was fined $50 a few days ago for kissing a pretty woman is prepared to dispute what that doctor says.

President Castro is reported to be "a very sick man" but he must remember that after the elections in the United States in November, men whose ravenous ambitions will not be gratified by the voters will be just as sick as he is.

Report comes from Delaware that Republicans are alarmed because Gas Addicks "is again displaying a large roll of money." Never mind. Republican alarm will cease as soon as Gas "displaying" it but scatters it around in places where they can get a chance at it.

VERDICT FOR $408.40

MEIER CASE ON MONDAY

Court Refuses Defendant a Continuance—Matter of Appeal in Melvin Horne Suit To Be Taken Up This Week.

A verdict awarding damages of $408.40 to the plaintiff in the case of Chas. H. Jackson, colored, against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company was given by the jury in the New Hanover Superior Court last night a little after 9 o'clock. By consent of both sides, the verdict was taken by Deputy Clerk W. N. Harriss and will be recorded when court convenes for the opening session of the second week to-morrow morning. It will be recalled that the plaintiff, a minor, was suing through his next friend, A. H. Jackson, for the recovery of $4.000 for a broken leg alleged to have been sustained two years ago as the result of being struck by a bundle of iron thrown on the floor of the freight warehouses of the company in this city by some employes of the defendants, the plaintiff at the time having been delayed in leaving the place by drays which were unloading and receiving freight at the door. The case was begun Friday afternoon and required all of yesterday until 5:30 o'clock for its completion. At that hour the jury retired and remained out until after supper in endeavoring to reach an agreement. The usual issues were submitted: "Was the plaintiff injured by the negligence of the defendant and if so, did he contribute to his injury by his own negligence," etc. The answer was a verdict as given above.

The trial of the case was resumed with the hearing of evidence yesterday morning, a number of witnesses having been introduced for both sides. It was near noon when all this was in and argument to the jury was begun by counsel. The argument was by Ex-Judge E. K. Bryan and R. K. Bryan, Esq., for the plaintiff and Messrs. Davis & Davis and Hon. Jno. D. Bellamy for the Atlantic Coast Line. The case will no doubt be appealed to the Supreme Court by the defendant company.

As yet there has been no appeal in the case of Horne against the Consolidated Company in which plaintiff was given a verdict. Counsel for Mr. Horne yesterday prayed for judgment in the case, but the attorneys for the Consolidated Company asked for postponement of the motion until this week, when it is understood they will ask that the verdict be set aside on the grounds that the amount is excessive. Should this be denied, it is likely that a motion will be made for a new trial. Upon a denial of either of the motions, it is likely that an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court.

A WHOPPER CAUGHT

The Star yesterday received a communication signed by Capt. George Cherbough, at Southport, in which it is stated that the fishing steamer Joseph Wharton, of the Cape Fear Fisheries Company, at Old Brunswick, had just towed in there at 6 o'clock a monster Wright whale, captured on the outside while looking out for menhaden the night before. The whale measured about 75 feet in length and its estimated weight is 90 tons or 180,000 pounds, the largest on record as having been captured off this coast. The giant mammal was taken up to the fisheries and will be cut up for fertilizing purposes. Capt. Cherbough says this is the second big fish caught by the Joseph Wharton's crew this season.

Whales have been brought into Southport before, but nothing like the size of the one by the Wharton yesterday. It is to be regretted that in the brief communication received by Capt. Cherbough he did not give more particulars of the remarkable capture. The giant fish was witnessed by many persons down the river yesterday.

THE HOTEL PROPOSITION.

Efforts Will Be Renewed This Week—Outside Capital.

Quite contrary to the popular supposition that the new tourist hotel project has been abandoned, Mr. W. A. Dick, who has the matter in charge, in an interview last night said that he was very much encouraged over the outlook for a materialization of the plans for the new enterprise. He has been engaged for a week or more in interesting outside capital in the hotel and has been successful beyond his expectations. While he was not prepared to give details of the impetus to the movement last night, he said that something would be doing the middle of the present week. He is still energetically at work on the matter and hopes to succeed independently of the mass meeting and the like as put forward by the Chamber of Commerce.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Series of Meetings at First Baptist Church Begin To-day—Dr. W. W. Hamilton, Talented Young Divine, Will Be Heard.

A series of revival services to continue indefinitely as the interest may seem to warrant will begin at the First Baptist church to-day, the Rev. Dr. W. W. Hamilton, of Atlanta, Ga., leading the services. Dr. Hamilton is one of the younger members of his church but is already high upon the pinnacle of fame as an eloquent and gifted preacher of the Gospel. He will be assisted in the meetings here by Rev. W. D. Wakefield, who will lead the singing. Both gentlemen arrived in the city yesterday and are guests of the Rev. Fred D. Hale, D. D., pastor of the congregation. It is proposed to have a great religious awakening in the city as the result of these meetings and already there is great interest in the arrangements.

The services to-day will be at 11 A. M. and 3 P. M., but during the week the hours will be 10 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock at night. The public generally is most cordially invited to attend and to join heartily in the spirit of the movement.

The services in the First church are to be followed next week by services in all the other Baptist churches of the city. There will be able sermons, good music and all else that will in any way contribute to the success of the revival.

FUNERAL OF MISS MARY A. WEST

Remains Laid to Rest Yesterday Afternoon in Oakdale Cemetery.

The funeral of the late Miss Mary Anna West was conducted at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the residence on Third, near Chesnut street, and the remains were laid to rest in Oakdale cemetery. There were many friends in attendance upon the services which were conducted by Rev. N. M. Watson, pastor of Grace M. E. church, of which Miss West was a devoted member. The pall-bearers were Dr. W. J. H. Bellamy, Messrs. Archie Craft, H. McL. Green, Wm. E. Springer, Marsden Bellamy, W. M. Hankins, W. B. Cooper and H. M. Foard.

At The Boys' Brigade.

The Sunday afternoon meetings for young men will be resumed at the Boys' Brigade armory at 5 P. M. today. Rev. J. M. Wells, D. D., the chaplain, will be the speaker. Mr. F. Carley West will sing and the accompaniments will be by Mr. Alf. H. Yopp. All young men are invited.

Tuesday and Wednesday are opening days at Polvogt's. All are welcome. *

NORTH CAROLINA!

Armored Cruiser Named In Honor of Tar Heel State Successfully Launched

AT NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

An Immense Throng Present—Christened By Daughter of the Governor—The Ceremonies Imposing—Banquet Followed Exercises.

(By Associated Press.)

Newport News, Va., Oct. 6.—The new and powerful armored cruiser North Carolina was successfully launched at 11:32 1-2 o'clock this morning from the yards of her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, in the presence of ten thousand people. The ship's sponsor was Miss Rebekah Williams Glenn, daughter of Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, who was present with his staff and an escort of prominent North Carolinians.

Miss Lillian Thompson, of Raleigh, N. C., was the sponsor's maid or honor and Mrs. A. A. Arrington, also of Raleigh was the dame of honor.

The launching was attended by Rear Admiral Berry, commanding this naval station and a large number of naval officers who went to Newport News in special tugs. Several of the officers of the Italian cruiser Fieremosca, now here, also witnessed the launching.

When the resonant sound of the sledge driving in the last wedge holding the vessel had died away the signal was given that all was ready to General Manager Walter A. Post, of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, who personally supervised the operations from the stand. A stout saw operated by two mechanics began to saw its way through the heavy timber while the crowd on shore kept eyes on the christening booth where stood Miss Glenn and her maids of honor, Governor Glenn and Mr. Post.

Suddenly the buzzing of the saw was drowned by a cracking of timber which announced the severing of the heel-piece below. The big ship trembled and began to slide down the ways.

"She's off!" came from thousands of throats and pandemonium broke loose.

Simultaneously with the first movement of the ship, Miss Glenn gracefully cast the bottle of old wine against the receding bow, saying:

"I Christen Three North Carolina!"

The cheering was so loud that her words were audible only to those near her.

Gaining momentum as it proceeded the cruiser struck the water at considerable speed, bow first, and glided out on the river, careening neither to the right nor to the left. The splash following the stern's contact with the river was the occasion for a most enthusiastic demonstration for the success of the launching was assured by the manner in which the vessel took to water. The cheering of the throng on shore was taken up by the crowds on the excursion steamers.

While the crowds looked on, disinclined to leave the scene so soon, tugs ran hawsers to the incomplete ship and finally towed her to the pier, where the finishing touches will be received.

The North Carolina is advanced about 58 per cent. toward completion, farther than any other armor-clad at the time of launching.

There was no hitch or accident to mar the day's programme.

Immediately following the launching there was a banquet at the Hotel Warwick to Miss Glenn and the launching party.

Governor Glenn and party left on their return for Raleigh at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

You will be welcomed Tuesday and Wednesday at Polvogt's opening. **

SILENCE IN THE PRESENCE OF GRAFT.

Some people in Pennsylvania are boasting of a $13,000,000 capitol building, a really magnificent structure which was dedicated at Harrisburg on Thursday. However, if we may judge from the remarks of newspapers in and out of Pennsylvania, the new capitol building is a monument of shame and a temple of graft. The building really cost only $4,550,000, but $9,000,000 was expended in furnishing it. The State is rife with scandal about it and there has been ugly talk for a long time, so that it was all known to President Roosevelt when he delivered the dedicatory address on Thursday. It was noticeable that in his address he never once mentioned the capitol building. He was shown all through it and he closely inspected its magnificent, costly and extravagant furnishings but not a word about it did he say in his address. He was simply silent in the presence of graft. Even weeks before the President was to deliver that address, some reputable Northern papers expressed a wonder in their editorials if President Roosevelt could go to Harrisburg and deliver that address in view of the scandals connected with its construction and furnishing. The circumstances call forth the following from the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot and with every word our esteemed contemporay says every impartial man can agree:

"To deliver an address on the occasion of dedicating a magnificent public structure, and never by so much as one word allude to the edifice, was the task of confession and avoidance which President Roosevelt discarged with painful success yesterday at Harrisburg.

"The marble walls and gilded minarets beneath whose shadow he spoke are adequate memorials of the skill of the architects and artisans who designed and constructed them, but they also stand for a carnival of graft in which the participants and beneficiaries were the men to whom the President addressed his political platitudes and moral truisms.

"What could the President have said about this splendid Capitol, founded on graft and roofed with thievery, that would not have added to Pensylvania's shame? He took refuge in silence, but that, too, was eloquent. For foremost in the minds of every auditor was the subject he did not mention, and more significant than any sentiment he uttered was that which he repressed, while his stereotyped homilies on honestly, carefully stripped of any local application, as they were, took on the shape of travesty under the circumstances.

"Mr. Roosevelt, after sundry graceful references to Pennsylvania's contributions to the cause of American independence and the shaping of the Union, and some fine enconiums on some of the great men in the not immediate past, broke off into commendation of the work of reformation accmplished by the last legislature. That all these beneficent reforms were instituted and pushed to completion in revocation of the iniquitous methods of government which Republicanism had imposed on the State through a long period of misrule, he forgot to mention. That the reformers won the power to pass remedial legislation by revolt against and overthrow of the Republican organiation, was a pregnant fact which he studiously ignored. That the same men who were reformed, and whose career of iniquity was halted by regulative law, are those who are now gathered in the political field striving to regain control of the State on the plea of strengtehening his hands, Mr. Roosevelt vouchsafed no hint. He seemed to be oblivious of the fact that a mighty struggle was now waging in Pennsylvania in which the issue is to maintain the vantage ground to complete the reformation, and the further fact that his party associates, the Republican organization, are striving by fair means and foul to recapture the ascendency and restore the old regime of rottenness, and are using his as the name to conjure with. If Mr. Roosevelt meant by his preachment to give aid and comfort to the brave and patriotic men who have disregarded party lines in the supreme desire to apply his pretty precepts to governmental practice, why did he not say so? By implication, at least, he encouraged the spoilers and conspirators, and no doubt they experienced a glow of conscious virtue while drinking in his apostrophes to civic righteousness."

No doubt Roosevelt's experience at Harrisburg was the mose embarrassing that he ever faced, but the circumstance offers the opportunity to observe how he can gumshoe when he wants to, and especialy to expose the corrupt party for which he stands while delivering homilies on civic righteousness.

SOUTHERN MEN CAN'T STAND FOR IT.

The Massachusetts State Republican convention on Friday urged the enforcement of the 15th amendment of the Constitution against the South. The New York Republicans recently took the same position. If any Southern man will read the proceedings of the Masachusetts convention and then vote the Republican ticket he is welcome to kiss the hand that smites him and strikes at the civilization of his section.

While the Raleigh News and Observer was not speaking of the action of the Massachusetts Republicans, that esteemed contemporary says t and it is good to add here:

"The man who wants to see another Legislature adjourn in honor of Frederick Douglas and refuse to adjourn in honor of Robert E. Lee should by all means vote the Republican ticket in North Carolina this year. No other sort of white man should vote it."

THE PICTURE IS THAT OF TEDDY

The Democrat who wrote the "size up" of Roosevelt for the National Democratic campaign book surely has been camping on Teddy's trail. The person who has tried to keep up with the flighty, oscillating, meteoric, seismic, volcanic and bifurcated career of Theodore Roosevelt, the ranchman, clubman, politician, warrior, free-trader, stand-patter, and President, will recognize the truth of all that is said in the campaign book.

CURRENT COMMENT.

They are talking of giving the automobiles the exclusive use of the parks in Chicago on Sundays. But how can they tell when it is Sunday in Chicago?—Philadelphia Press.

If President Roosevelt is the "issue" in New York, as he was in Maine, the Republicans are doing their best to keep the news from him.—Washington Post.

—Modest and retiring lawyers need to beware or they will be nominated by Murphy or Hearst to a Supreme Court judgeship. Even obscurity seems to be no protection.—New York Commerical.

It must be said in favor of the head of the Mormon Church that a man who can live in peace with five wives is a shining example for the millionaires who are finding it impossible to get along with one.—Washington Post.

—Bourke Cockran is the only man we know of who can be, like Cerebus, two or more gentlemen at once. In doubling back on his political trail some time he is going to have a rear-end collision with himself.—Columbia State.

The cost of picking a bale of cotton is about nine dollars; that is ninety million dollars for the average crop. The Southern negro ought not to starve with that annual income. The work woul require a million and a half of laborers and then one hundred days to clear the fields.—Norfolk Virginian Pilot.

The sticklers for party regularity who are swift and bitter to condemn McClellan for refusing to vote for Hearst, should remember that last year when McClellan was the regular nominee Hearst not only voted but ran against him. It doesn't lie in the mouth of a chronic bolter and independent to censure others for retaliating in the same coin.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

That often "things are not what they seem" was proven by the testimony of a Richmond negro street beggar in court that he frequently cleared $45 a week in his profesional capacity as a solicitor of alms. The court decided that he needed a vacation to rest from his onerous labors and he is now resting in the county jail. But while those whose generous impulses over-ride their better judgment thus encourage mendicacy, the vagrant will continue to be more or less of a permanent institution.—Charlotte Observer.

The charges against Senator Bailey are that he has sold himself to the corporations, and that he is geting rich serving the trusts. Some of his enemies appear to think he ought to remain poor all the days of his life, and at the end of his career depend upon the poor house for shelter. Senator Bailey takes a different view. He believes in using his talents in accumulating a competency, but not in serving corporations that are without the pale of the law. He has earned some pretty big fees, but no one has yet shown that he has done anything a Senator of the United States cannot honorably do. A safe forecast of the Texas Senatorial situation is that Senator Bailey will put his enemies to rout and be triumphantly re-elected.—Savannah News.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—An election on the question of the issue of road bonds amounting to $300,000 by Wake county has been ordered. The county will be thoroughly canvassed in order to convince the people of its necessity.

—State Librarian Sherill, at Raleigh, says there has been a very good gain in the number of new books this year and that many about North Carolina or written by North Carolinians have been purchased.

—Three new brick-making plants have begun business at Raleigh this month. The demand for brick, not only in Raleigh, but all through that section, is so great that it cannot be met. The failure to obtain brick has considerably delayed work on a number of buildings.

—Kinston special, Oct. 5: The jury of inquest over the body of Bill Herring, who was killed in Sand Hill township Thursday by Hosey McCullen recommended the arrest of McCullen and trial for murder. Evidence at the investigation tended to show bad feeling between McCullen and Bill Herring's brother.

—Durham special, Oct. 5: The American Tobacco Company in this city has made a swepping raise in all of the works and throughout all departments. In this raise the foremen, operatives and all the employes are given about a ten per cent. increase over the old wages. The new schedule of prices has already gone into effect.

—Durham special, Oct. 5: The case of the Blackwell Durham Tobacco Co., of North Carolina, against the Blackwell Durham Tobacco Co. and the American Tobacco Co., of New Jersey, and others, on the calendar for trial at this term of court, has been continued for the term. This was done on account of the matter now pending in the Supreme Court as to whether the case shall be ordered removed to the Federal Court.

—Newbern Special, Oct. 5: Engineers for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad have been busy in this neighborhood for a week making a survey. There is no concealment that the A. C. L. is waking up, and that it is trying to save itself by building from here to Washington, N. C., and so try to secure some of the business which the Raleigh and Pamlico Sound road is certain to get. The A. C. L. engineering force is working towards Washington, N. C., this week.

—During the past week the rains have been so heavy in the mountains that several trestles were washed away. On Friday near Asheville a landslide in the mountains stopped trains for several hours.

—Charles Dixon, a flagman on the second division of the Seaboard Air Line, was killed at Monroe Thursday morning while coupling cars. His body was taken to Danville, Va., his former home.

—Durham special, Oct. 5: Most of yesterday the time of Superior Court has been taken in the trial of a case of E. C. Johnson, against the Western Union Telegraph Company, in which he sued for mental anguish on account of the non-delivery of a telegram in which he was told of the serious illness of a child in Danville. The child died and he sued for $2,000. The case was decided this afternoon by the jury awarding him damages in the sum of $300.

—Rocky Mount Special, Oct. 5: Mr. Louis Fountain, son of Mrs. S. K Fountain, of this place, met with a very painful accident yesterday afternoon while attempting to cross the railroad track between two freight cars which were being coupled together. Finding that he was about to be caught between the cars he threw out his hand and pushed himself out of the way, but in doing so his hand was caught in the coupling and his fingers cut off and his hand and forearm badly crushed. He was taken into the law office of Mr. T. T. Thorne and received surgical attention. It is feared that his arm will have to be amputated.

—Smithfield special, Oct. 5.—When Marion Butler entered the court house here at noon to make his carefully prepared "prosperity" speech to his carefuly gatheréd Republican crowd, his calculation were disjointed by the request of Congressman E. W. Pou for a division of time. Few in the crowd of old line radicals who filled the court house had anticipated this move and the townsfolk were also in total ignorance of Mr. Pou's intention. As a consequence, the crowd was largely Republican, with a few negroes thrown in as black mementoes on the rear seats, but Pou poured hot shot into Butler and rattled him on his record and that of the Republican party.

—Hendersonville Special, Oct 5: After skipping around the country to get away from his angry brother-in-law newly acquired Baron Frederick Von Gordon-Seefield has gone to Germany with his wealthy and pretty American bride, having made good his boast of securing an American heiress The Baron came to America for the grab game and in New Orleans met Miss Portevent, an orphan, sister of the wife of Frank W. Haynes, the New Orleans cotton king. He put up his love song and won out, but Brother Portevent kicked and the Baron seemingly quit. But Mrs. Haynes owns a handsome country place near Flat Rock, N. C., and here, she brought her sister, and the Baron followed in an automobile, slipped off with his American heiress and were wedded here. They hurried to New York, and though the angry brother followed, got away on a steamer to the old country. Miss Portevent, or rather Baroness Calla Portevent von Gordon-Seefield, has visited in North Carolina frequently, staying most of the time with her sister. She has many friends here. She is a very pretty young woman, and has a large estate in her own right.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes." Now "Herpes" is the family name of disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; it is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

JAPANESE MAT RUSH

Native Product That Might Be Turned to Good Account for Manufacturing Purposes—Department of Agriculture Encouraging Growth.

All the so-called "Chinese matting" used for covering floors in the United States and Europe is imported from Japan where it is woven in hand looms from the dried stems or straw of a species of Bog-rush. This identical rush, Juncus effusus, is native to the entire eastern section of the United States where it covers thousands of acres of marshy and boggy ground.

Owing to the cost of hand labor the weaving of matting has hitherto remained a monopoly of the Japanese and Chinese. Recently there have been invented and patented in the United States several power looms for weaving matting. The inventors of these looms claim that they can compete successfully with hand labor of any country and only await the supply of suitable and sufficient raw material to begin the manufacture of floor matting on a large scale.

In Japan the matting rush is grown as a semi-spontaneous or by-crop along the banks and ditches of rice fields. It has been so grown for many centuries and has been subjected to a crude kind of selection which has produced special varieties suitable for different classes of work. The American rush never having been utilized has not been improved, but there can be no doubt but that under scientific culture, selection and cross breeding the American plant would in a very few years give improved varieties -probably far superior to any of the Asiastic varieties now known.

In the meantime the United States Department of Agriculture has through its Bureau of Foreign Exploration introduced the varieties of rush most grown in Japan. These are to be given a practical trial in the rice growing region. All these varieties come from the warmer portion of the Mikado's empire and are not likely to suceed except where rice flourishes. The two plants require much the same kind of soil though the rush does not require the frequent floodings nor the same amount of labor that rice does.

In North Carolina the Japanese rush will without doubt succeed on the wet bottom lands of the Cape Fear, Neuse, Tar and Roanoke rivers. The crop when grown on a commercial scale is specially adapted for large farmers who can utilize improved machinery.

The bogrush, Juncus effusus, is a perennial plant related to the lily family. Once planted it will hold the ground for a life-time or longer. The rootstock resemble those of Johnson and Bermuda grasses and like these grasses the rush forms a thick mat of roots in the ground. The cultivation of a field of bog-rushes would consist of little more than an annual scarification of the ground with a heavy cutting harrow to break up the matted roots. Sufficient fertilizer would have to be used to ensure the largest yield of high quality straw. The harvesting of the crop may be done with mowers or better with self-binding reapers. The annual yield should be from 4 to 8 tons of salable straw per acre. There would be three or more cuttings each Summer.

The writer advises every owner of wet lands in the eastern section of the State to procure from the United States Department of Agriculture enough plants of the imported Japaness rush to give this crop a fair trial. Such trial plants can be had free of cost by applying to the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., or to any Congressman.

The rush crop is not recommended for upland soils nor for any but the eastern counties of North Carolina.

Large owners of swamp or disused rice lands who think of starting in the proposed culture will be furnished with more particular information as to markets and probable profits by applying to the undersigned.

Danger from the Plague.

There's growing danger from the plague of Coughs and Colds that are so prevalent, unless you take Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Mrs. Geo Walls, of Forest City, Me., writes: 'It's a Godsend to people living in climates where coughs and colds prevail. I find it quickly ends them." It prevents Pneumonia, cures LaGrippe, gives wonderful relief in Asthma and Hay Fever, and makes weak lungs strong enough to ward off Consumption, Coughs, and Colds. 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottle free.

Thousands of Dollars for Dandelion.

It costs thousands of dollars to obtain the sole agency for Dr. Edward's Dandelion Tablets and Pills, and it is costing us thousands of dollars more to buy trial packages to give to you and all sick ones free of cost. But we felt that the only true way to convince you of the merit of these two preparations, was to present you with a trial package at our expense. We spent months investigating their value before we decided to pay a very large sum for the privilege of putting them on the market. We could not afford to risk our reputations by endorsing anything that would lay us open to public censure, either through the magazines or the medical profession; our inquiry as to the intrinsic merit of Dr. Edward's Dandelion Tablets and Pills was therefore of the most searching character.

You need have no hesitancy in accepting our gift, because it places you under no obligation whatever. We pay for every trial package that is given away. In justice to yourself you ought to take advantage of this offer. Remember we dare not make such emphatic statements unless we were absolutely sure of the truth of our remarks. One misstatement would mean exposure and disgrace. You can obtain a trial package of Tablets from drug store named below.

What Dandelion Tablets and Pills Are.

Everybody knows that Dandelion is the most valuable of all Nature's remedies. Well, Dr. Edward's Tablets and Pills are simply common dandelion (Taraxicum) in a concentrated form combined with other harmless ingredients of purely vegetable matter. They are one of the very few proprietary medicines endorsed by the medical profession. If your physician desires to know what these preparations contain, have him write us and we will gladly send him the information together with the name of the expert chemist who superintends their manufacture.

Fac-Simile of Label on Box.

Diseases Cured by Dandelion Tablets and Pills.

Constipation.

In constipation the Tablets act as a mild cathartic; the Pills are slightly stronger, but both tablets and pills act upon the mucous membranes of the intestines, therefore their action is absolutely sure and also for this reason they never gripe or cause the least discomfort. They are equally good for children as well as adults, because they are a tonic and do not produce any unnatural condition of the bowels.

Stomach Trouble.

The Tablets are the best to use in case of Stomach Trouble which takes the form of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, etc., because they tone up the system and stimulate the flow of gastric juice, thus very effectively aiding the digestive organs to perform their proper functions. Their mildly cathartic action also relieves the stomach of all refuse and undigested matter.

Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism.

All kidney trouble and nearly every case of Rheumatism is due to presence of uric acid in the blood. Dr. Edward's Dandelion Pills through their direct action upon the Liver and Kidneys restore these organs to a sound and healthy condition. The uric acid then passes away through the natural channel and the blood becomes pure again and free from all poisonous matter.

We only guarantee to cure Rheumatism when it is caused by presence of uric acid in the blood. We have cured hundreds of causes because this is usually the cause of rheumatic affections.

Liver Trouble.

Through their direct and immediate action upon the liver Dr. Edward's Dandelion Tablets and Pills induce a natural flow of bile. This relieves the congested condition of the liver and enables it to perform its important work of keeping the bowels and stomach in a healthy condition.

Nervous Trouble.

It is well to remember that disordered nerves are nearly always caused by a disordered stomach. We do not make a specialty of nervous troubles unless they are caused by stomach trouble—then we cure them permanently.

ARCH HYPOCRISY OF REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Democratic Campaign Book Severely Arraigns Roosevelt and Stand-Patism—President's Vagaries and Inconsistencies Exposed—Party Scandals.

Washington, D. C., October 1.—Bearing the motto "Equal rights to all, special privileges to none," on its title page, the Democratic campaign book for use in the approaching Congresional campaign, was issued today by the Democratic Congressional Committee. It is one of the most voluminous of any similar publication heretofore gotten out, being composed of two hundred and forty pages, and containing a vast amount of matter designed to combat the claims and policies of the Republican party, while at the same time it upholds all the principles for which Democracy contends Although the book embodies a fund of valuable information from Democratic standpoint, in the way of statistics, speeches, and other useful data, the principal subjects discussed are tariff history, trusts and combines, corruption, and scandals, the attitude of Democracy towards organized labor, the wage question, extravagance of Republican appropriations and other questions of national interest.

After quoting in full the platform adopted by the National Democratic convention at St. Louis, in July, 1904, the book enters into an exhaustive history of the protective tariff system, going back to the first act of 1789. It is declared that the Republicans refer to this act "with unremitting joy" because of the preamble that "It is necesary for the support of the government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers, that duty be paid on goods, wares and merchandise imported." Various tables follow, giving a list of the articles upon which in the earlier days duty was imposed, while paralleled with with them is a table showing rates under the Dingley tariff act.

Tariff, it is maintained, disproves the Republican platform contention that "A Democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity, a Republican tariff by business prosperity," and with respect thereto the book has this to say:

"That hoary Republican misstatement has been reiterated in every campaign since the war, but it remained for Senator Lodge to embalm it in a Republican platform, and to have it approved by a President of the United States."

It is asserted that all the panics in this country have occurred under Republican auspices and with the highest protective tariff, and that in France the same conditions prevailed, while in freetrade England there has been only one panic since 1873 "That the present 'boom' will be followed by a panic," the book continues, "is only a question of time."

Numerous instances of Republican tariff changes are quoted, from which the deduction is made that in forty-five years the Republicans have changed or revised the tariff law forty-eight times.

"But at last," the book states, "the Republicans and their allied friends and providers of fat campaign barrels, the protected monopolies secured a measure that has so fostered and fattened the corporations that they are quite willing to stand pat, especially as they have succeeded in defeating the reciprocity treaties, to provide for which the tariff schedules were purposely increased 20 per cent, beyond the rates that the protected monopolies named as sufficient to protect them from competition.

"Hence the people are now burdened with the extra rate plus a revenue and a protective rate—three all told."

The evidence is overwhelmingly, it is asserted, that the present tariff law has fostered trusts and combinations, and a demand is made for a revision of the tariff toward a reduction of the duties. By reason of the shelter of the tariff it is declared that the trusts and combines have advanced the prices of their products and at the same time sell cheaper to foreigners than our own people. Coupled with this statement are a number of quotations tending to show that Republican leaders admit the charge immediately following which is a list of American products shipped abroad in large quantities and upon which it is stated the lower prices are accorded. Reference is then made to the speech of Speaker Cannon, at Danville, Illinois, August 16, last, when he furnished statistics of wages and incomes for the fifteen years between 1890 and 1905, in which the Speaker is quoted as acknowledging that in that time, average yearly wages increased slightly less than 9.4 per cent. It is asserted that during the same period the value of manufactured products increased 58.7 per cent, and the inquiry is made "Does Mr. Cannon and other stand-pat Congressmen call that a fair deal?—an increase of 58.7 per cent for the trusts and only an increase of 9.4 per cent for the wageearners." It is insisted, therefore, that "Speaker Cannon, in his fight with labor, should avoid statistics, for they are a two-edged sword in the hands of anyone that does not understand their significance, as Mr. Cannon evidently does not."

In order to show "how the tariff plunders those with limited incomes," the book has to say:

"Those whose incomes are stationary and who get no increase to correspond with the increase in the cost of living are in worse plight than other people. The aged man or widow with a small but fixed income finds nearly one-half of its purchasing power cut off and themselves unable from age or infirmity from working to increase their incomes. Nothing remains for such unfortunates but the pinching economy that comes hard, when comfort should be the rule. The grasping trusts and corporations are, through the monopoly created by protectionism, sucking the life blood of those with limited incomes to the tune of 47 per cent. That is Republican usury made legal by the statute known as the Dingley tariff law."

A number of trusts, which the book states were aider by the McKinley tariff, are specifically named, added to which is the statement that that tariff law was a producer of deficits and panics. Numerour tables are produced to support this contention. It is declared that the Democrats inherited discouring conditions from the Harrison administration they having operated under the McKinley tariff eighteen months. As a revenue producer, it is stated, that tariff was a failure, "but a successful breeder of panics and a responsive mother of trusts."

Much space then is given to the subject of corruption and scandals in the Republican party, particular reference being made to the allegations of Judge Parker just before the last presidential election, and which were vigorously denied by President Roosevelt in a public letter. The life insurance disclosures are cited, and in defense of Judge Parker the book states:

"Judge Parker received from one who knew the names of the few who undertook to underwrite the campaign, but the names were given in confidence. The charge was made by him, not at all, with the idea that it would influence the result, but because he believed that such practices must end or the Republic will soon be one in name only. That the Psychological moment to arouse public interest was before the campaign closed, not afterward, when it could be charged that the sting of defeat was his motive. Such public interest as should bring about investigation of the contributions of insurance companies, banks, trust companies, railroad companies and giant protected interests, was his aim."

Continuing the book says:

"The report of the Armstrong committee of the New York legislature, published since Mr. Roosevelt made these sweeping and apparently impassioned, but really crafty, denials, proves that Parker spoke the truth and that Roosevelt was mistaken when he said the charge was 'unqualifiedly and atrociously false,' and it is added that 'the stream of corruption continues from year to year, from election to election—and always from the same locality and same fountain head—Republican States, Republican strongholds, under Republican laws.'"

Allusion then is made to Republican legislation favorable to the trusts in behalf of Panama Canal Supplies.

The proposed ship subsidy legislation is discused at length. Explaining that the word "subsidy" is not used in the titles of the bill because the Constitution does not authorize subsides, it is alleged that the real purpose of the bill was not disclosed by its title, but, rather "Its object was the 'legalized robbery' of the masses for the benefit of a few persons engaged in the shipping business, especially the steamship trust, who had furnished money to Mr. Hanna and his associates in 1906 to help elect the Republican ticket."

The subject of railroad rate legislation is discussed in extenso, the book maintaining that the Democrats from the very first had striven for such a measure, and with regard to the recent law enacted there is this to say:

"The present Congress enacted a railroad law, amending the Act of 1887. It would have been law, had the Republicans been so disposed, years ago.

So controlled by the railroads were many of the Republican Senators, that this bill could not have passed this (59th) Congress without the unanimous action of the Democrats, and the President's "big stick," which drove and kept enough Republican Senators in line, to pass it. At a very acute stage of the contest the President found it necesary to request a conference with leading Democratic Senators They gladly conferred with him and the press made great note of the unusual act. His position at that time was that which for years the Democrats had occupied, but he was forced by the opposition in his own party to give ground, and to break faith with his Democratic conferees by consenting to the broad court review."

In this way, the present law—the very best that the people could get from a Republican Congress—was passed.

Nothing was left undone by the Democrats in either House that could possibly and honorably force an unwilling Republican Senate to act.

If the Republican Senate had done half its duty, there would have been a railroad bill passed into law long before 1887.

Attention is next called to the "extravagant appropriations of the Fifty Ninth Congress," and in connection therewith reference is made to the creation of deficiencies in violation of law. It is stated that since 1898 these have exceeded a half million dollars, and that those who disobeyed the law should have been, but were not punished.

Under the head of "Departmental Scandals," Secretary Shaw is charged with "neglecting the duties of his office, traveling about the country making speeches for the 'stand-patters' and carrying on a campaign for the presidential nomination in 1908, but still drawing a salary which he does not earn, and setting a bad example for his subordinates." The comptroller of the currency is declared to be inefficient, by reason of the failure of the Walsh Enterprise and other banks. It is declared that "The little rogues are prosecuted but the big ones are allowed to escape."

With relation to their attitude towards organized labor, the book asserts that the Democrats were the first to give it recognition. Its record in this regard is gone into with some care, and its position is summarized as follows:

"It is safe to say there has not been a statute enacted by Congress for the relief of the 'workingmen of the United States' or 'organized labor' that the Democrats have not given it their hearty support."

Taking up President Roosevelt's position on the question, it is declared that his "hostility to the labor element is no secret. He has expressed it in his books, in his official utturances and by his acts." It is stated that "he regards representatives of labor unions as members of the 'rogues gallery,' 'sleek, oily fellows,' 'bulls of Bashan,' 'lazy, selfish, brutal, envious, violent,' 'murderous,' 'a mob.'"

Regarding the recent order of the President insisting on the enforcement of the eight hour law "on government work, it is stated that the result of elections in Maine this year and the hostile attitude of organized labor in other States toward its enemies in Congress has driven him against his will to perform a plain statutory obligation. Organized labor so understands it, and the public so understands it."

Returning to the subject of the tariff, the book asserts that President Roosevelt at various times in his career has been a freetrader, a tariff reformer and a stand-patter, and that he "May lead a movement for tariff revision in 1908," and then it has this to say:

"Mr. Roosevelt has written nothing distinctly and unequivocally stating his position since he withdrew from the Free Trade Club; but it has been given out at Oyster Bay this Summer that he is fully in accord with the views of Speaker Cannon and Mr. Sherman, which have been summarized in the language of gamblers and beggars: 'Stand pat and pass the hat.'"

Under the caption "The Motive behind the 'Big Stick,'" it is charged that President Roosevelt favors big corporations in Porto Rico and the Philippines, and that he would make laws advantageous for them; that he wants a big military and naval force, to include subsidized merchant marine and that he has perverted the Monroe Doctrine in the interest of the Asphalt Trust in Venezuela. It is stated that not until he found it necessary to win Democratic support for his policy of imperialism did he ever say a word in praise of any Democratic statement or Democratic achievement.

Quotations follow from some of the President's books, referring in alleged uncomplimentary terms to Jefferson, Madison, Benton and others.

"These libellous and scandalous sayings," it is declared "reflect the true spirit of Theodore Roosevelt. What he now says is said to win approval for the 'big stick' policy, by insinuating that such a policy was really inauguarted by Jefferson, and Monroe, and not by the big American corporations' which he is serving, and which he seeks to enthrone in the Philippines, Porto Rico, Cuba and Santo Domingo. Even when he tells the truth, he does so in order to disguise an evil purpose, or to justify by precedent a wicked policy. Surely, no one who values sincerity will be influenced by the utturances of Mr. Roosevelt."

The charge is then made that "the President favors certain railroads and accepts gifts from them—violated the interstate commerce law—demands and receives money for junketing expenses—authorized deposits of public money in favored banks without interest—diverts funds appropriated for one purpose to another—allows public money to pay for a literary bureau to boom his policy."

"Mr. Roosevelt has shown greater regard for the interests of corporations and less regard for the law than any other Executive the country has ever had."

Maintaining that the principles of the Democratic party defy and always have opposed monopoly, it is stated that the Democrats were the first to introduce anti-trust bills, whereas the first resolution to investigate the trusts was not acted on by a Republican Senate.

Maxton, N. C., 3.—The event of the seaason was the marriage this afternoon at 5.45 o'clock of two of Maxton's most popular young peple, the cntracting parties being Miss Florence Wooten and Mr. Sylvester B. McLean.

Ever since the announcement of the coming marriage of these two young people some time ago, society has been in a flutter of delight anticipating the event which would unite the heart and hand of two of its most prominent members. The Presbyterian church was crowded with those specially favored to witness this plighting of troth which would unite members of two of Maxton's prominent and honored families.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. H. G. Hill in his usual solemn and impressive manner. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion and showed much taste and skill. The marriage took place in the new church building and these young people have the distinction of being the first couple to be married in it.

The ushers were Messrs. M. W. Cole and A. M. McNair. Just before the entry of the bridal party Mrs. A. B. Croom sang Schubert's Serenade, being assisted by Mrs. J. C. McCaskill, Jr., at the piano. Mrs. McCaskill played Mendelssohn's Wedding March for the entry of the party and Grace's as they left the church. The attendants were Mr. J. D. McLean, brother of the groom, best man, and Miss Mabel Wooten, sister of the bride, maid of honor, Misses Bessie McNair, Elizabeth Bonnor McLean, Mary Campbell McCaskill and Annie Hill, of Maxton, Ethyl Johnson and Lida Law, of Red Springs, bridesmaids, and Dr. D. C. McIver, Dr. J. D. Croom, Jr., F. L. Black, of Maxton, J. G. McCormick, of Lumberton, J. B. Gibson, of Dillon, S. C., and Dr. Peter McLean, of Laurinburg, groomsmen.

The bride wore crepe de chine over white taffata and carried a shower boquet of Lillies of the Valley. The maid of honor wore white organdie with a pink girdle and carried pink carnations; the bridesmaids wore white carnations. The gentlemen wore the conventional black. The bride's traveling suit was of blue with hat to match. They left on the S. A. L. train at 6:30 for northern points to spend their honeymoon.

The wedding presents received by this young couple were many and beautiful as well as costly, attesting their popularity among the people from all parts of the State and other States. Among them was a handsome silver service, a present from the members of the Robeson County Bar of which Mr. McLean is a member.

The bride is a daughter of Maj. and Mrs. T. J. Wooten and is a young lady of rare accomplishments and is universally loved and esteemed by all who know her.

The groom is a son of Mr. J. A. McLean and is popular with all his friends and acquaintances. He is a young attorney of much promise, being the senior member of the firm of McLean & Black.

TRIP TO A FIXED STAR.

Would Be a Long Journey Even With Transportation Facilities.

There is a perpetual fascination about the stars and the immense distances at which they lie from one another and from us. To demonstrate the vast distance of Centauri from this planet a popular scientist gives the following illustration in London Answers: "We shall suppose that some wealthy directors, for want of outlet for their energy and capital, construct a railway to Centauri. We shall neglect for the present the engineering difficulties, a mere detail, and suppose them overcome and the railway open for traffic. We shall go further and suppose that the directors have found the construction of such a railway to have been peculiarly easy and that the proprietors of interstellar space had not been exorbitant in their terms for right of way.

"Therefore, with a view to encourage traffic, the directors have made the fare exceedingly moderate—viz, first class at 1 penny per hundred miles. Desiring to take advantage of these facilities, a gentleman, by way of providing himself with small change for the journey, buys up the national debt of Britain and a few other countries and, presenting himself at the office, demands a first class single fare to Centauri.

"For this he tenders in payment the price of the ticket, £1,100,000,000.

"Having taken his seat, it occurs to him to ask:

"'At what rate do you travel?'

"'Sixty miles an hour, sir, including stoppages,' is the answer.

"'Then when shall we reach Centauri?'

"'In 48,663,000 years, sir!'"

HENRY BELL'S COMET.

The First Steamer That Plied For Hire In Great Britain.

Among the curiosities of advertising may surely be placed the first advertisement of the first steamer that plied for hire in Great Britain—namely, Henry Bell's Comet. Thus ran the advertisement in the Glasgow Courier of 1812:

"Steam passage boat, the Comet, between Glasgow, Greenock and Helensburg. For passengers only. The subscriber having at much expense fitted up a handsome vessel to ply upon the river Clyde between Glasgow and Greenock—to sail by the power of wind, air and steam—he intends that the vessel shall leave the Broomielaw on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays about midday or at such time thereafter as may answer from the state of the tide and to leave Greenock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in the morning to suit the tide. The elegance, comfort, safety and speed of this vessel require only to be proved to meet the approbation of the public, and the proprietor is determined to do everything in his power to merit public encouragement. The terms are for the present 4 shillings for the best cabin and 3 shillings for the second, but beyond these rates nothing is to be allowed to servants or any other person employed about the vessel."

What would poor neglected Henry Bell have said could he have seen his humble little Comet, of whose elegance, comfort and speed he was so proud, alongside a modern ocean racer or one of the latest palatial river steamers of the Clyde or Thames, all so well advertised?—Chambers' Journal.

The greatest problem in the Millinery Department is to show the new ideas of both foreign and home artists first, when successful models and beginning to be generally copied. We discard them and introduce something new. It's a race against time and only a store especially organized for such service can ever hope to accomplish it.

Our Millinery Department has proven its value to you by the very work we speak of and more new ideas find their introduction here than any other store in this city can boast of. And with all we charge but moderately, never more than other stores, nine times out of ten much less.

We will show over three hundred pattern hats at our opening.

Opening Week in the Suit Department.

Rods, racks, tables, shelves filled high with the cream of Cloakdom. The result of months of careful selections.

REMOVAL NOTICE

Owng to the fact that the little store at No. 111 Market street, is not half large enough to accommodate our large stock and constantly increasing trade, we have leased the new Garrell store, S. W. Corner Princess and Second, where we will have more than 10,000 square feet floor space. After October 1st, until the new Garrell store is completed we will be at Nos. 19, 21 and 21½ North Second street, the rooms now occupied by the Salvation Army and J. E. Wilson, and for the next few days store No. 129 Market street, under the Bonitz House.

For the same fair treatment, high grade goods and low prices which have made for us the largest furniture patronage in Eastern N. C., come to any one of the abovenamed places. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, we will make special prices on a few fine Mahogany and Birds Eye Maple and Quartered Oak Suits, Chiffoniers, Side Boards, etc.

MRS. M. A. McLEAN DEAD.

Passed Away Yestedray at Home of Her Daughter in This City.

Mrs. M. A. McLean, mother of Mrs. Jas. H. Taylor, Jr., and a woman held in the highest esteem by all in the circle of her acquaintance, passed away at the home of her daughter, No. 313 Grace street, this city, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. McLean came to Wilmington from Charlotte some months ago to make her home with her daughter here and was in the best of health until early Wednesday morning when she was stricken with paralysis. It was seen from the first that her condition was very critical and in spite of the tenderest care, she gradually sank until the end came at the hour named yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. McLean was 73 years of age last July and is survived by two daughters and one son: Mrs. Taylor, of this city, and Miss Carrie Lee McLean, of Charlotte, and Mr. J. Thomas McLean, of Charlotte. They have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

After a short service from the residence this afternoon by Rev. Fred. D. Hale, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, to which Mrs. McLean removed her membership soon after coming to Wilmington, the remains will be taken on this afternoon's train to Lincolnton, N. C., to be laid beside the grave of her husband, the late J. Logan McLean, of that town. Mr. Jas. H. Taylor, Jr., and Miss McLean will accompany the remains and will be joined at Charlotte by other relatives and friends who will attend the funeral at Lincolnton Monday afternoon.

WILMINGTON AND RALEIGH.

The Joining of These Cities by Direct Railway Line.

The Raleigh News & Observer of yesterday has the following in its editorial columns:

"The through train from Raleigh to Wilmington via Fayetteville, which is promised us in the next ten days, will give Raleigh a seaport, as the completion of the railroad to Fayetteville gave us water competition. But it is not a new idea. In 1834, now 72 years ago, the Wilmington and Raleigh Railroad Co. was incorporated to go over the same route. Later the terminus was changed from Raleigh to Halifax and then to Weldon, the name being changed to Wilmington and Weldon Railroad Co., now the Atlantic Coast Line. The men of 1834 were right. There was need for a railroad from Raleigh to Wilmington and after the lapse of nearly three quarters of a century their judgment is vindicated and their hopes are realized."

IN "HER OWN WAY."

Audience Enthusiastic Over Miss Lynden and Supporting Company.

The merits of the attractions presented the past week at the Academy of Music seem to have proceeded in an ascending scale, reaching, according to the popular verdict, the top last evening with Sylvia Lynden in Clyde Fitch's new and popular play, "Her Own Way," a story of fashionable environment and of great human interest. Unfortunately the night was Saturday and the audience was not what it should have been. There can be no doubt, however, of the enthusiasm of those who saw Miss Lynden in the role of Georgiana, for she became at once the popular idol of those in the playhouse. The supporting company is clever and the costuming and staging of the piece is all that could have been desired.

journment of court yesterday evening, heard a motion of Messrs. Davis & Davis, counsel for the defendant, asking that the trial of Frank Meier against the Consolidated Company be continued until next term upon an affidavit that the wife of Joe Meier, plaintiff's intestate, was too ill to be in court and that she was a material witness for the defence in the case. Judge Jones ascertained the facts it was sought to prove by her and held that these could be shown by witnesses already subpoenaed and he refused to continue the trial. It will begin first thing Monday morning of this week. In addition to the regular jury for the week and 25 men previously ordered summoned, the Sheriff was ordered to go out and summons fifty additional ones in order that there may be no delay in the selection of the jury. It will be remembered that Mr. Meier, administrator of his brother, Joe Meier, sues for a large amount of damages for the killing of the latter on the suburban line of the company, near Greenville Sound, three years ago. The case will likely require the better part of the week for its trial.

HAS FEVER ON BOARD.

British Schooner at Quarantine From Colon, Panama.

The brig previously reported as having arrived at the Cape Fear Quarantine Station and thought to have been the Henry Clausen, Jr., from Porto Rico to Wilmington, proves to be the British schooner Cartagena, 199 tons, Capt. Cahoon, bound from Colon, Panama, to New York with cargo of cocoanuts. She has been out since July 31st., and put in at Southport on account of sickness of the crew. The captain, second mate and two members of the crew are very seriously ill with typhoid malaria. One negro seaman died at sea and was buried before the arrival of the vessel at Southport. The men are being made as comfortable as possible at the quarantine station and may be transferred to the Marine Hospital in this city.

There was a wild rumor in the city last night that it was yellow fever on board the schooner instead of malarial fever as reported. Dr. Sprague, surgeon in charge of the quarantine station who would have no interest in suppressing the facts, was called up by telephone last night and gave emphatic denial to the reports of yellow fever, explaining that the men have a very malignant type of malarial fever, nothing more.

Their Infant Dead.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Christian will tenderly sympathize with them in the death of their little daughter, Emily Gilliam, aged a little over 16 months, which occurred last night at the family home, No. 219 Harnett street. The child was particularly bright and its taking-away is a sad blow to them and to the devoted grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Duke, with whom the parents live. The funeral will be held from the residence at 4 o'clock this afternoon and the interment will be in Bellevue cemetery.

To Catherine Kennedy Home.

All bills of the campaign having been met and a surplus of something over a hundred dollars being in the hands of Secretary and Treasurer C. C. Covington, of the Finance Committee, of the Democratic County Executive Committee, a majority of the members of that body have about decided to donate the amount to the Catherine Kennedy Home, a most worthy institution of this city. Mr. Covington was looking into the matter yesterday with a view of turning the money over to the charity named.

Wire Workers Walked Out.

Six inside electrical workers employed by the Southern Electrical Company walked out yesterday evening upon the refusal of their employes to grant certain demands as to wages and hours. It is stated by the employers that the places of the men will be filled and that all work will be resumed within a week at least. The merits of the controversy are unknown as neither side will make an official statement as yet.

State Fair Exhibit.

The committee in charge of the New Hanover exhibit at the State Fair next week has been industriously at work the past week and feels much encouraged at the outlook. There are others, however, yet to be seen and in the meantime any voluntary responses would be thankfully received.

LOCAL DOTS.

—Adjutant Wiggins, formerly of the Salvation Army, will preach at Brooklyn Baptist church this morning and evening at the usual hours.

—Mr. Ike Shrier is distributing souvenir match safes bearing the card of the International Tailoring Co. They will prove especially useful to 'possum hunters.

—The tug Alexander Jones arrived up yesterday, having been only partially successful in righting the overturned wreck of the schooner R. D. Bibber, off the Cape Fear bar.

—The annual meeting of the Atlantic Yacht Club will be held Tuesday, October 9th, at 8 P. M., in the Mayor's office at the City Hall. All members are urged to be present.

—'Squire W. McD. Evans is completing on Third street, between Brunswick and Bladen, a new magistrate's office which will be open for the holding of his courts, etc., in a few weeks.

—At a recent meeting the New Hanover Republican Executive Committee Mr. D. L. Gore, the well kown Wilmington wholesale grocer, was elected chairman. Mr. D. D. Lennon is secretary.

—Mr. W. L. DeRosset, Jr., the printer, has removed his office from the Allen building to second floor at northeast corner of Water and Princess streets, formerly occupied by the late Col. Thos. Evans.

—The local cotton market took a tumble of an eighth of a cent yesterday and closed firm at 7 3-8. The receipts continue quite heavy, and most of the staple is coming from the territory south of Wilmington.

—The steam tug Marion is laid up for a day or two on account of an accident in breaking a crank pin down the river near the fisheries Friday night. She is tied up at the Custom House wharf until the repairs are completed.

—A little son of Mr. Henry W. Angel fell from a wood shed on a lot adjoining the family residence yesterday and suffered a painful fracture of the arm at the elbow. The littte fellow was severely hurt but was resting well at last accounts.

—Rev. A. W. Seabreeze, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal parish, has returned from the North and will hold the usual services at the church today. Sermon and Holy Communion at 11 o'clock. Evening service at 8 P. M. Sunday School at 3:30 P. M.

—By deeds filed for record yesterday Godfrey Hart transferred to George R. Bate, Jr., and W. E. Bate, for $75 property in Masonboro township, and Jerry Fonveille and wife transferred to H. C. Twining and J. E. Morris, for $10 and other considerations, one hundred acres of land in Cape Fear township.

—Rev. A. J. Parker, pastor of Bladen Street M. E. church, has returned from Rocky Point where he has been assisting the Rev. W. F. Sanford in a series of protracted services. He will occupy his pulpit as usual to-day and Rev. A. McCullen, pastor of Fifth Street M. E. church, will preach at night.

—Friends will hear with sorrow of the death of Mrs. Mary F. Williams, which occurred yesterday afternoon at 3:25 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Kelly, No. 910 North Fourth street. Mrs. Williams was 76 years of age and was held in the highest esteem by all. The funeral will take place from the residence at 4 o'clock this afternoon and the interment will be in Bellevue cemetery.

—It seems necessary again to make the announcement that notices of church services to secure insertion in the Star must be written out as it is desired that they appear and sent to the office on the afternoon previous to the date upon which they are published. No charge is made for these announcements as is done in most cities and we cannot undertake to receive them by telephone in the busy hours of the night. They are cheerfully published when sent to the office.

Judge Bornemann in Demand.

While enjoying the play at the Academy of Music last night, Justice Bornemann was called up to the third gallery or "roost" of the house to put a quietus on a negro named George Williams, who was making a nuisance of himself. The judge promptly hauled Williams out of the "roost" and he was required to give bond for trial Monday at 10 o'clock. With a consciousness of duty well performed, the judge was on his way home about 11 o'clock when, passing Ruth Hall, he saw a mass of black humanity surging out the door and heard the crack of a chair as it was being wellded by some strong arm. The judge rushed into the midst of the fray and arrested "Boy" Byrd and Robert McLean, who were making a rough house of an entertainment that was in progress in colored "high life." Both men were recognized for their appearance Monday.

Confederate Meeting.

Burgaw, N. C., Oct. 6.—Camp Dave Williams met in the Court House here to-day at 2 o'clock, Pettegrew Moore, in the chair. In the absence of the secretary, Mr. R. L. Player acted. After the usual routine of business before the camp, Mr. F. T. Croom, Register of Deeds of Pender Co., introduced in very grateful terms Hon. T. H. Wells, nominee for the Legislature, who spoke for about twenty minutes in very touching language of the hardships which the old soldiers bore in that conflict. He assured them that he would always remember them as he was a son of a Confederate soldier. The meeting adjourned to meet again December 27th, 1906.

WEDDING AT TEACHEY'S.

Miss Sallie E. McIntire and Mr. Wharton Justice Married.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Teachey's, N. C., Oct. 6.—On the evening of Sept. 20th inst., at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. H. C. E. McIntire, Miss Sallie E. McIntire and Mr. Wharton Justice were united in the holy bonds of matrimony., Rev. Mr. Currie, of Wallace, officiating. Promptly at 7 o'clock the bridal party entered the neatly decorated parlor, and there before an audience of well wishers was the ceremony performed in a sweet and solemn manner. Beautiful was the prayer sent up for this couple and the blessings asked for them, who so fearlessly made their vows unto God —the author of all good.

The bride was becomingly attired in a modest gown of white organdie, carrying in her hand a beautiful bouquet of white carnations and ferns and wearing in her hair flowers and sprays of real orange, while her maid of honor carried pink carnations and ferns. Directly after the ceremony they all repaired to the dining room, where a lovely table was spread and a merry party was there indeed and all seemed to enjoy their supper hugely. Immediately after supper the bridal costume was removed and replaced by a neat traveling suit of gray. The bride and groom left on the evening train for Washington, New York city, Niagara and other Northern points.

The Suburban Schedule.

Cars on the suburban line will be run every half hour from 1 to 5 P. M. The car on the beach is being run to-day, and will connect with all trains arriving at Wrightsville, so that passengers can go to the beach by changing cars at Wrightsville. The company expects to complete the repairs to the trestle very shortly, and then the cars from the city will run all the way over to the beach as formerly.

CUBAN REBELS GIVING TROUBLE

Thousands Refuse to Disband Unless Palma's Volunteers Do so Also.

FORCE MAY BE NECESSARY

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Havana, Oct. 6.—The disarmament of the rebels cannot be successfully completed until the volunteers organized by the Cuban government have been paid off, disarmed and disbanded. That is the position that has been taken by various rebel commanders scattered throughout the island which are strongly inclined to remain under arms until the volunteer organizations disappear. This is the only important factor now retarding the otherwise fairly rapid dispersal of the rebel forces.

The disposition of the provisional government is to yield to this demand. The volunteers would have been mustered out of service sooner but for the necessity to have some force in attendance for the purpose of guarding the towns. It is realized, however, that in many sections the presence of volunteers and the militia only acts as an irritant to the surrendering rebels. The conduct of the volunteers to their late opponents is not always exemplary and what seems most needed is the presence of a sufficient force of United States soldiers and marines to so garrison every town that the volunteers can be rapidly dispensed with and succeeded by capable and well disciplined American soldiers.

Until the towns are thus garrisoned it is not believed that pacification will be complete. While the provisional government is not insistent of getting in all or even a majority of the guns held by the rebels, it is believed that more of these weapons would be surrendered, but for the presence of the volunteers. This attitude is apparent at all points where the revolutionists are in considerable force, but it is particularly so in southern Santa Clara, where the progress of disbandment today was very poor and where the number of guns surrendered was ridiculously small as compared with the number of men dispersed.

General Guzman's big force is now completely disbanded and the only visible weapons in the possesion of the men are machetes. It is estimated that from the 8,000 or 10,000 rebels in the province of Santa Clara, no more than a thousand guns will be recovered. The commissioners realize that it will require another week to get all the arms that will b surrendered and complete the dispersal of thei nsurgents. At Hatuey, in the province of Puerto Principe, a force of 400 insurgents commanded by Brigadier General Reynose refused to surrender their guns while the volunteers were permitted to retain theirs. General Hernandez wired General Funston that the volunteers must be disbanded before he could succeed in disarming the rebels.

This attitude on the part of the insurgents is directly contray to the pledge General Guzman made to Governor Taft. At the outset of the disarmament movement, Guzman, with the other leaders, agreed to lay down their arms, making no stipulation that the government troops should do so likewise, relying wholly on Governor Taft's promise of protection. This obstacle to pacification tends more than any other toward a decision to employ American cavalry to complete the disbandment of the rebels.

Gov. Magoon Leaves for Cuba.

Washington, October 6.—Governor Charles E. Magoon, who with General Bell, Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Bacon, left Washington today for Havana, will exercise in Cuba all the power which was vested in General Leonward Wood, when he ruled Cuba under the title of military governor. Governor Magoon will be known as the provisional governor but his authority will be plenary and he will be subject only to the orders of the President and Secretary of War. Cuba will have the semblance of an autonomous government and the United States will continue to be represented in Havana by an American minister and the consuls will continue at their posts. Cuba will represented in Washington by a minister and the consuls are expected to remain at their stations. It is officially stated that there has been and will be no subdivision of the Cuban constitution. By incorporating the Platt amendment into the constitution, Cuba provided for just an emergency as has arisen and for the United States to intervene and restore order. consequently, it is said, Cuba is still to be governed by constitutional means and by machinery such as provided in any community when martial law is necessary. During the occupancy of Cuba, it is not expected that the Cuban Congress will exercise any power. In fact, there is no method by which it can be assembled unless Governor Magoon shrould deem such action necessary to prepare the way for another election. Such a meeting is not necessary for the provisional governor by decree may perform all functions looking to the re-establishment of the civil government of Cuba.

POCAHOSTAS MINE HORROR.

Victims Number Thirty-five and All Bodies Recovered.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Roanoke, Va., October 6.—The Associated Press tonight received the following telegram from the Pocahontas Collieries Company dated Pocahostas:

"We will be glad to have you announce that we have now recovered the bodies of all the employes lost in the West mine disaster of October 3rd, the total being 35. Twenty men who were at first believed to have been lost, have since reported in person. The property loss is found to be much less than was at first anticipated. The work of clearing the mine of debris and wreckage is being pushed. The ventilation of the mine is perfect and we hope to resume work in full during the coming week. The other two mines which were not affected by the disaster will resume work on next Monday. The cause of the explosion is as yet unknown."

IN MILLINERY
Dress Goods, Cloaks and Clothing

Our Millinery Department has made special preparations to show the ladies a treat in head wear. Our stock in this department was never larger. Our head milliner, Miss Brown, and Miss Smith, our head saleslady, have recently returned from New York and Philadelphia where they spent three weeks visiting the large retail openings of those cities taking advantage of all the latest styles on exhibition.

Our pattern hats, as well as the untrimmed stock, will be marked down at the very lowest prices, and we trim all hats free that are brought to us.

We also carry a large stock of new hat frames which have been carefully selected and which you can have made to your order.

Our millinery department is on the same floor with our cloaks, waists and skirts. In this department you will also find our underwear for women and children. This stock you will find very strong and we have all the styles which you may desire.

Our dress goods and silk department is on our first floor, and in this department we have better salespeople than ever before.

Ladies who are visiting the Millinery Opening, I will be glad to have stop and see our dry goods and dress goods departments.

We have a large quantity of new Fall goods on display and to buy your dress goods from us will be a saving to you. We have also an extensive display in trimmings, buttons and braids.

Our lining department represents all the colors, all styles of fine material used by dressmakers.

Our cloak department has been nicely arranged on a floor to themselves. We carry an immense line of cloaks for both retail and wholesale.

The department is in the charge of two of our young ladies who will do their best in showing you through the department and in pleasing you. You will also see in this department a big line of furs of the very latest styles ranging in price from $1.00 to $15.00 each.

Remember the days of the Opening is Tuesday and Wednesday, October 9th and 10th, and beginning at 9.00 A. M. and closing at 7 P. M.

We will have music each day.

AS TO WILMINGTON

Special Crrrespondent of Baltimore Manufacturers' Record Has Interesting Account of the City Its Industrial Progress.

A special correspondent of the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record has the following article in regard to the progress and advantages of Wilmington:

Wilmington, N. C., September 24.

Wilmington of 10 years ago and Wilmington of today are two different propositions. The progress made in this city of late years has been remarkable, and at the same time the country surrounding Wilmington has been greatly developed, and still offers an inviting field for settlement and enterprise. No other region in the United States presents so many attractions in the manufacturing or farming line to the man of large or moderate means. This is true because of the wonderfully fine climate, the fertility of the soil, the abundance of pure water and the peculiar purity and richness of the air. In cotton culture the State of North Carolina takes a prominent place among her sister States of the South. There are but few counties of the 96 in which it is not grown, and the area devoted to it is considerably over 1,000,000 acres.

Wilmington is also strong in its industrial wealth. The visitor will find its streets well paved, and electric cars run through the principal thoroughfares and into the attractive suburbs. One of the factors in the development of Wilmington is the firm of Messrs. Hugh MacRae & Co., who never lose an opportunity to do something which will be of advantage to the city. The present electric railway company, an enterprise of their creation, showed great forethought in constructing its road to the beautiful Wrightsville Beach, about eight miles distant from the city, and this fine ocean resort is the means of bringing many strangers during the Summer months from all parts of the United States. It is a veritable Atlantic City in embryo. Wilmington is also a residence city, and is constantly drawing a desirable class of permanent residents because of its educational and social advantages and its special attractions for home-making.

For manufacturing, for trade, for health, for climate, for pleasant residence, for education, for society, for all good people, whether bent on work or rest or money-making, or money-spending, Wilmington has great attractions. For manufacturing it has room for development, and the enterprising members of the Chamber of Commerce have made up their minds that in this particular the city shall develop more in the coming few years than in the past. They are offering inducements to manufacturers, either large or small, to locate here. One very necessary addition to this place would be a fine up-to-date hotel, which always helps a city's growth, and I am credibly informed that there is now a movement on foot to build a fine fire-proof hotel to cost $200,000, and the greater part of this sum has been subscribed. More building has been done during the last years, which is an indication that the population is being constantly increased. The property values have also increased wonderfully. For instance, a vacant lot was sold a while ago for $20,000.. It was improved to the extent of putting up one building 30x120 feet, and this building and the lot on which it stood was sold for one-half of the entire purchase price, $10,000, and at the present time on the balance of the lot there are three stores, a bank building, the general offices of the Southern Express Co., and space not already built up for another big building.

Business among the stores and banks has steadily increased. The Southern National Bank is one of the most popular and progressive banks in the city. Mr. C. N. Evans, the cashier, has always been known as a hustler, and since his connection with this enterprise there has been "something doing." The Hyman Supply Co. is a new concern which from its very inception has been enjoying a liberal patronage. The Southern Electric Co., Inc., electrical contractors, reports business as being exceedingly brisk. Its volume of busines has increased to such an extent that it was forced to move to other and larger quarters, where it will be in a position to add to its already large business. The Wilmington Iron Works is also another substantial concern which has steadily grown until at the present time it does business in a much larger territory than heretofore. With those who desire further information about Wilmington the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. James Kyle, will be glad to communicate. I. S. FIELD.

To brand a beer "Pure," but actual purity means to double the cost of the brewing. That is how we attain it.

Schlitz beer is brewed in absolute cleanliness, and cooled in filtered air. Then it is aged for months to avoid causing biliousness, then filtered through white wood pulp. Then every bottle is sterilized. That is why Schlitz is unique for its purity.

A LAW OF THE DESERT.

With Water and Food Scarce, Extreme Measures Are Warranted.

It was in the camp of Bullfrog that Mitchell, the big brick red mining man of Nevada, told me his view of law on the desert:

"If you are prospecting with an unreasonable hog of a partner who wants to eat three slices of bacon and half a loaf of bread for breakfast and lets the canteen gurgle down his throat while you get along with a strip of bacon and just moisten your lips when you take a drink, then you're all right if you kill him. I'd kill him if there wasn't anything else to do. It's a tough game, and it's your life or his when you're lost or your grub stake and water are giving out."

These observations are suggested by the arrival in camp two days before of the bones of a prospector who had died of thirst some forty miles from Bullfrog during the previous summer. He had been a carpenter, earning wages of $8 a day in the new camps during the "boom," but the gold fever led him away from this safe and profitable toil. He picked up a partner, they loaded their burros and trailed off south toward the Death valley country to prospect in the Funeral range.

Three weeks after the desert swallowed them up the partner wandered into a freighters' camp, half crazed with thirst and exhaustion. He was able to tell the freighters that the carpenter was somewhere out beyond, lost and without water, too helpless to move. The partner was too weak and fevered to go back with the rescue party of freighters, so they left him in camp. He directed them as well as he could, but the search was bootless, and Griffin, the carpenter of Bullfrog, was added to the long list of desert victims. Several months later a party of prospectors tumbled by chance across what was left of him. There were no traces of his outfit. He had thrown away his gun, his canteen and his hat. One shoe was found thirty feet from his body, and he had torn off and flung away most of his clothing. These were the ghastly evidences of the last great fight he had made to struggle on.

"When they're dying for water," said Mitchell, who knows the "desert game," "they throw away everything until all their clothes are gone, and you generally find them without a stitch on."—Ralph D. Paine in Outing.

Always In Season.

When Hiram Bassett went down on Cape Cod to pay a visit his friends provided him with every sort of fish they could muster, and for five days he was treated to mackerel, halibut, oysters, clams, scallops and many other varieties in the best possible condition.

"Well, Hiram," said his host on the day of Mr. Bassett's return to his home, "I'd like to see what you'll get Hannah to cook for you first thing when you reach home. I reckon you've had fish enough to last you for one while."

"Pooh!" said Mr. Bassett. "I guess you don't know anything about it. You haven't lived in Massachusetts long enough. Hannah 'll get me the same thing she always does when I've been away from home for a spell—a real good mess o' codfish an' potato hash. That's what Hannah 'll get me."

Zigzag New Yorkers.

"Nobody in New York walks straight," said the fault finder. "Watch a score of pedestrians on the sidewalk, and not one of them sticks to a straight path. Those deviations are not always due to the crowded condition of the pavement either. During the rush hours a man is supposed to dodge this way and that in his efforts to make progress, but when given a clear road there is no excuse for so much sidetracking. Yet, no matter how favorable the conditions, the New Yorker zigzags just the same. He might have a stretch of sidewalk, a block long all to himself and be perfectly sober, yet in that distance he would veer from curb to stoop line and back again several times."—New York Post.

The Man of San Fernandez

By CLINTON ROSS

Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association

I QUITE appreciated Van Brule's embarrassment, for I knew Trilany and all the circumstances of that sorry episode which had thrown him out of the pale by which the conventional keeps itself aloof from the unconventional. What Trilany did, good and bad, was once in everybody's mouth, and in his case, as far as the bad part went, five years had not altogether quieted the scandal—scandal springing up to throttle a man when his deeds have put the cause of it far away from him.

But you who know the sort of chap Jim Trilany is and was—with his impetuousness and his faults and his charm of manner—you need not wonder that when Van Brule ran across him that day he did exactly what he did, impolitic as it was, for nobody in New York invited Jim Trilany then. He was as much forgotten as a man who is dead—socially, I mean—the scandal about him, as I say, never quite getting into oblivion, fools repeating it, and thoughtless people, who were perhaps not altogether fools, carrying it on whenever his name chanced to be mentioned.

Trilany, you know from what he did in Samoa, where he saved his ship, was not the man to "run into his hole" because of what was said about him.

The matter of Van Brule's embarrassment was that Mary Van Brule was giving a dinner. A woman who gives a dinner as successfully as Mrs. Van Brule is no second rate sort of genius. She knows where to place people, and her table rarely fails in the wits being pitted against the person of poor wit—quite cleverly, you know—so that the poor wit is never affronted, and in putting a pretty girl and a clever girl exactly with the right escorts, and the people who go together always together, and the people who go apart always apart—a table as nicely arranged, mind you, as a good chess player arranges his men after the first ten moves.

This particular dinner was one given to Lady and Sir Arthur Groffin, her majesty's consul to San Fernandez.

Everybody knows, I dare say, about Mrs. Chatwind's marriage to Sir Arthur Groffin. Mrs. Chatwind met Sir Arthur in Cannes, I believe, and he was a man who had always been in the foreign office, never acquiring any great distinction, always up for some little appointment that paid none too well and supporting the fine manner of the man of the world on a small enough income. When Mrs. Chatwind met Sir Arthur she was fifty and he something about sixty-five, but with an American failing for that sort of thing she had not lost her ambition and was glad to be Lady Groffin. Although she had a daughter, as everybody knows, who some years before—how many years must I remember? I am getting old myself—was the most attractive young woman at all the important occasions.

After she had married she followed Groffin to many places around the world, Eleanor Chatwind always in her train, a young woman who could say clever things and leave you wondering what she meant, who had a crowd of admirers, although she was now quite thirty, and who kept them all conjecturing who was preferred and who wasn't. She had been engaged once, and people hadn't forgotten that, because it was connected with what I am telling you about.

Well, two days before that dinner a man failed Mrs. Van Brule, and she called out her husband and told him to find somebody, and what did he do but meet at the club that very evening Trilany, and, forgetting all about Trilany's past and the scandal about him, what did he do but ask him to come around two days after, if in town, to a bit of a dinner his wife was giving. "You must, Jim—you must," he insisted.

Trilany, I think I have said, was a man who never ran away from a scandal; but, on the other hand, he was the last man in the world to go to a house where that old matter might embarrass his hostess and his host. So I can't quite account for his accepting this invitation, save for the very persuasive force that Pierre Van Brule possesses and because particularly he always had a strong influence on Trilany. At any rate, he accepted.

When Van Brule told his wife she exclaimed in horror:

"Why, you know, the dinner is for the Chatwinds. Don't you remember?"

Then Pierre did remember, and that was the cause of his embarrassment.

Without describing it myself, I think I may as well tell what happened when Trilany went into that house. Mrs. Merryweather, who remembers everything, remembered it.

"That man here?" she cried—in a whisper, of course—to Daisy Barton, who remarked that he was very handsome, and then said all at once, "Oh, do tell me what it is about!"

"Why, don't you know?" said that dear old gossip, who enjoys more meddling with other people's affairs than with her own. "He is Trilany—Lieutenant Trilany used to be—and he did some wonderfully fine things, I believe once. Saved a ship out in Samoa in that awful hurricane—you remember. Then about a year after he was acting captain somewhere on the Pacific station, and he had been going to pieces for some time, I think, for they talked about it in Yokohama, and the rumor reached over here, saying that he was drinking himself to death. In a fog off Hongkong the Tarrytown, his ship, was run down. The crew for the most part were saved, but twenty were lost, three officers too. Lieutenant Trilany was court martialed, and it was proved that he was not capable of doing anything at that time. He was dismissed from the service in utter disgrace. I am told he has not drunk a drop since. But he's not one of the men you know now. You see, the Trilanys are a good New York family, too, and he was very much in it once. Well, well—well, well! Men do such queer things, and I'm not saying that women don't do queerer."

"Oh, dear," said Daisy, "how interesting! I could just fall in love with a man like that."

"Not really in love?" said Mrs. Merryweather, turning.

"Oh, I don't believe people do that nowadays, do they?" said Daisy, with an innocent air.

The hostess, you may believe, in the meantime was fidgeting. Never was a hostess in a greater dilemma, and when presently the Groffins and Miss Chatwind entered she had that vague, helpless feeling that she wished the floor to open and swallow her, although she was usually capable of standing on any floor, even did it open.

Sir Arthur came across with his foreign office manner—an exaggerated manner of having done things which hid his minor achievements—and Lady Groffin, quiet, red faced, important, and behind a tall, slim, fair girl, who looked up suddenly with a little gasp, dropped her fan to hide her embarrassment, which Dickie Burton picked up in his effusive way, she forgetting to thank him. Her eyes were now on a man in the corner across the room; now away from him.

Mrs. Merryweather, still beside Daisy, leaned over and in her deep whisper that tells all the news of the world one wants to know said:

"You know, they say, it was that girl who ruined that man."

Daisy leaned forward to hear more.

"Do tell me!" she said.

But the hostess was arranging the couples, and she did not hear them.

How that dinner went on is one of Mrs. Van Brule's deep chagrins. Never was a dinner more stupid, nor did the wine seem to raise the spirits. As for the unexpected guest, he said nothing in particular and then suddenly—after the fish, I believe—began to talk with a calm, admirable self possession. He looked across at Miss Chatwind and remarked, "I haven't seen you in a long time." Miss Chatwind, usually so self possessed, said nothing in particular. She seemed frozen. She was not often that way.

After dinner—the hostess thanking her stars that it was over—Trilany was alone for a moment. When the men had come in from their cigars he loitered behind, and when he came out he met Miss Chatwind in the hall.

"I was waiting for you," she said.

"Oh, were you?" he replied coldly.

"I wanted to tell you again"—

"Oh, don't let's talk about it!" he said. "Come, do let me take you back in!"

They entered the room together, and the hostess for the first time felt relief, since, after all, perhaps she had not made so bad a faux pas. As for what happened afterward I haven't very clear evidence. From what I now know about it I am quite sure that conversation between those two young people was not very amiable.

* * * * * * *

I have started this story with this account of what happened at Mrs. Van Brule's dinner because it makes plain more easily than I otherwise could the strange events that followed and which are only explainable on the ground that Trilany was a man like no other man—a man who would win back, although the world was against him.

It was after most of the appointments had been made that I myself ran across him in Washington. He had applied for the chance of retrieving himself—any sort of appointment in the service. But the administration and the department, which had so many appointments at their disposal, had no leniency for a man who had gone through so utter a disgrace. He seemed to have no chance at all, and finally he believed that he had none save such as he could create out of his own forceful will.

Some time afterward General Miguel de Gonzales, commandant at San Fernandez, received a visit from a man he had known, though this man was completely worn down and a vestige of his former self. General Miguel de Gonzales, you may remember if you were about Washington some years before, on his upward career in Spanish politics and diplomacy had been military attache of the Spanish legation, and at that time he had known Lieutenant Trilany, who was a man in evidence about the clubs when he was off duty and a man of considerable wealth and social position who did a great deal of very charming entertaining—a man at that time to know.

General Gonzales knew the subsequent events of his career, and so he was not altogether surprised when he turned up at San Fernandez with this story: He had crossed from Key West with a Cuban expedition. They had effected a landing, but had been scattered by the coast guard. His real object, he told General Gonzales, was not to join the insurgents, but to go directly and offer his services to a man whom he knew out of a spirit of revenge, which perhaps a Spanish officer could understand. He had no wish to do anything but fight against a land that would give him no chance of retrieving himself—in fact, like the hero in Everett Hale's story, he was a man without a country.

General Gonzales reflected considerably on this proposition. Trilany's knowledge of Spanish manners—he at one time had been a naval attache at Madrid—was complete, and so he had been able to reach San Fernandez without any great suspicion being aroused as to his nationality after he had once escaped from the coast guard. He was a man who might serve well, Gonzales reflected, in his force, for despite the assertion of so many Spaniards Gonzales had a wholesome respect for the mechanical knowledge possessed by American officers. He had just lost by death from yellow fever the man who knew more about the guns of the fortifications of San Fernandez than any one else. The loss had seemed irreparable, and here was a chance, if this man were sincere in his assertion that he had deserted his nationality, of gaining a man who might be equally as valuable as the one he had lost, if not more so. But could he trust this Trilany? Now, the Spanish temper, from my own knowledge of it, about men's motives differs very considerably from the Anglo-Saxon. A Spaniard may be a man with high notions of honor and still believe that the primitive emotions control men to a great extent in love and hate and war, and that revenge is something that will seize a man and hold him until he acts out of it.

This man Trilany was utterly disgraced by his countrymen. He was a man, on the other hand, whom Senor Gonzales had every reason to believe had given up those bad habits which had ruined him. He saw him once, twice, a third time. Trilany was a good deal of a diplomat. His force won over the commander of San Fernandez, and he ended by receiving an appointment in the Spanish garrison. From having the appointment, to a man of this character, it was not far from having an ascendency over the officers about him. He knew more than they about guns, and his skill and marksmanship were something that he seemed likely to be able to impart to his advantage.

Now, strange circumstances had brought together and cooped up in that little Cuban seaport the English consul's stepdaughter, Miss Chatwind, a girl of American birth, and this Trilany, who was betraying his country. Senor Gonzales in the limited round of society there had found the English consul's house a most entertaining spot and the entertainment, you may be lieve, lay much in Miss Chatwind's eyes. He was probably reticent about his affairs, but one day in a spirit of exultation and perhaps to counteract the report that was then current in San Fernandez that Admiral Cervera's fleet has been dispersed by Commodore Schley he told the story of how he believed that many Americans were coming over to Spain. He had one good man, anyway, who wasn't appreciated at home.

"You may know him, Miss Chatwind: a Lieutenant Trilany."

She looked at him with a dull horror.

"Do you mean that man has given up his country?"

"Of course—most certainly. He is here."

She was not very talkative after that. The next morning, close after sunrise, a woman came out of the consul's house and went up the narrow street to the old cathedral and entered and knelt down and then went half hesitatingly and confessed to the priest, although she was not a Romanist, for even self contained women may be carried away by impulse, such being the safeguard given them, and it is sometimes quite as bad to be too much self contained as to be too impulsive.

Days passed—days of event, days of rumor, days when the scurrying fleet could be seen from the back hills, days when General Gonzales was exalted and then depressed and when Sir Arthur Groffin felt himself more busy than ever before in any of his other appointments.

One afternoon a servant from the British consulate brought a letter to Lieutenant Trilany.

A Spanish colony in wartimes is a queer sort of place in our good Anglo-Saxon sense of "queer." There are those little officers all about, and now and then a big man, but not very often, and then the little soldiers of an earnest gesticulating race are not gesticulating quite so much as the little chaps we see in France. Among these you would see in the wartime at San Fernandez a tall, dark, earnest faced man, very well kept now, though he had come there shabby in mind and health and dress.

When the food supply began to get a bit reduced, as it did, and the townsfolk went around begging of the officials in some way to secure more beef, more oatmeal, more anything, it was this man whose quiet, calm demeanor was of extreme assistance to General Gonzales in quieting a populace that so easily might be turned into a mob. Although for the most they did hate the Yankees when their stomachs were empty, the craving desire for food was more than racial prejudice.

This officer, the renegade American, if you will, had, as has been told, a very keen knowledge of projectiles and no mean information about engineering, for since his dismissal from the United States navy, being a man of means, he devoted himself to the careful study of engineering topics, both in France, where that science is so well advanced, and in Germany. He brought to San Fernandez a mind well equipped and the judgment which made his knowledge extremely useful. So it followed very naturally, he having reached the point of being completely trusted, that he knew every mine, for he had located most of them, as well as every gun of the shore works.

To return to the woman in the case, for one must always return to her sooner or later in every case, Trilany had long been aware of Lady Groffin's and her daughter's presence in San Fernandez. Although he at one time had put them quite out of mind, or supposed he had, he found himself rather troubled about the British consul having his family in so dangerous a spot, and then he remembered that nobody could withstand Lady Groffin's will. Her nature craved excitement and variety, and she doubtless saw that she was laying up many good future dinner stories from the experience to be gathered at San Fernandez.

About this time Trilany had the note, which ran:

"I am writing this not because I care about you at all—and, although I know that once I treated you very badly, it may not appear vain of me to say so—but I am writing it because in those days you certainly were a gentleman—at least you seemed so to me—and I can't understand the degradation, so far beyond the former, to which you have sunken. The only charitable supposition I can have is that you are mad. I don't know why I am writing this, but the whole case seems so fearful that a man who has once been an officer in his country's service should go completely over to her enemy and sell himself out of petty pique, for after all it's petty, and it's only conceit that leads us to exaggerate our personal affairs to so much importance as you have put yours.

"You will understand from this how thoroughly I despise you, and perhaps I have taken the pains to tell you because I do despise you, although, of course, you may not care about my opinion."

Days passed—days of excitement that was not suppressed, days when people paid extraordinary sums to get away and could not get away even with more extraordinary ones, days when every break in the line of the horizon outside of the harbor was watched with apprehension—not only with apprehension, but with fearsomeness—and when again there were lines of the blockading fleet or plucky gunboats getting in range of the fire of the ports, when brisk cannonading added to the impressiveness of it all. The British consul, Trilany heard, had sent his wife and stepdaughter back into the country somewhere to a safe place well garrisoned, although he was forced to remain at his post.

A misty morning came, a haze and downpour of the rainy season, when everything is moist, when out of the moisture comes that lassitude that seizes your muscles and nerves and leaves you quavering, the lassitude which perhaps is a warning that the fever has taken you. On such a morning suddenly a line of ships, despite the mines, appeared in the narrow entrance of San Fernandez, and then a downpour of shot and a rise of smoke and a hail of noise fell over that community. The forts replied stubbornly, persistently. General Gonzales was everywhere, for he was a brave man. No man had more physical bravery. Suddenly an officer came flying to him.

"Half the guns are spiked. We can't answer back."

What a rage there was then! What ineffectual anger!

Yet with the unspiked guns they kept up a brave resistance and so strong a one that the invaders at last put out to sea, leaving many of the defenses, to be sure, crumbling and some twenty soldiers killed and half a dozen persons wounded and another half a dozen dead among the blameless townsfolk, for the logic of battle is that noncombatants shall be hurt and perish as well as combatants.

A great and thorough investigation occurred that night. The tall American stood before General Gonzales and said almost sneeringly:

"Yes, you're right, general; I spiked the guns. I was here to do it. I couldn't serve—they didn't give me a chance. But I would serve. There's the story. Stand me up against the wall and shoot me. That ends the rest of it. I am not going to shrink from the usage of war, and a very proper usage it is."

Now, they say, Trilany was marched out, and the executioners stood in line, muskets raised, when an orderly rushed up and ordered them lowered.

The prisoner was marched away, to be shut up in the Morro castle, for it had been discovered that he must not die, because no man in San Fernandez knew the location of the mines—the exact location of all of them, that is—save this self confessed traitor. That knowledge must be had. The gunboats, or the two that were left—there had been five—could not stir about. The situation was most remarkable, and certainly from the point of view of General Gonzales and his officers it was terrible. For himself the general saw nothing but court martial and the extreme sentence, for his weakness had given the man the position.

The prisoner was brought before him again. Yes, he knew, but he would not tell. They did not know what to do with him. The only plan recurring to them was to hold him up by his thumbs, a method pursued on Spanish ships. They let him down when he had lost consciousness, his hands torn out of shape, but he had not said a word—in fact, it was three days after this before he could speak coherently.

The British consul told his family the episode. One day Miss Chatwind presented herself at General Gonzales' quarters. She asked very briefly if, because she had known the prisoner in the old days, she might not see him. The general had been extremely devoted to the young lady, although it may not have been altogether jealousy which prompted him to give her a refusal. Her insistence against his duty did not avail. But she persuaded her stepfather to let her remain in San Fernandez for the present, even if he were much against it.

Four days after this Trilany in his cell, somewhat recovered from the ordeal through which he had passed, heard the bolts drawn and the jailer appeared, although it was not his usual hour. The man explained in a very few words that he had arranged for his escape. He listened with the utmost astonishment. The man went on and said:

"I have been well paid for it, and I propose to get away with you where they can't catch me. A boat will be waiting at midnight outside of Pinos point," Pinos point being about four miles from the southerly entrance to the harbor of San Fernandez and well removed from the works.

* * * * * * * *

That night this was accomplished, and the jailer and his prisoner under the cover of a most dark night put out to sea. The next morning the little boat was picked up by one of the newspaper tugs following the fleet. There were two rowers, a man in the uniform of a Spanish infantry sergeant and a man hollow eyed and worn down, who seemed to talk rather incoherently and then stopped talking, but finally asking to be sent at once to the admiral or the senior captain.

It chanced that a portion of the American fleet on its way back to the waters of Havana next day passed the tug. The strange man had impressed the reporters in the boat, and, although they could not place his nationality, they thought he had something to say. As they could not get it out of him, they made an effort to secure him the audience desired. He declared he would not see any lesser officer than the one in command. The newspaper men in the meantime sent word by way of Key West of the story, making it very significant.

Three days later the captain saw the man. He thought his face was familiar, but he was not sure. The man had some paper given him. In the cabin he sat down and drew a military map. Turning, he said:

"There, sir (it was after a half hour or more), is the location of every gun every mine, every defense of every sort in or about the harbor of San Fernandez."

"How am I to believe you? Who are you, anyway?"

"I was once, sir, James Trilany, lieutenant of the service."

Then the captain knew the resemblance he had noticed.

"Sir," he replied, "you'll be a lieutenant of the service again—and you are now!"

* * * * * * * *

Before we had war it was a story that was told. When it came it was a real story, and this, believe me, is a part of the real story, with, thrown in, the strangeness of a woman's temper—that unaccountable she whom you never can quite solve and perhaps whom we should never care about so much could we solve. At least one of the pleasures of life is the game of chance, and no game dealing with chance has quite so many chanceful circumstances as that one game which men call woman. They, on their side, doubtless could prove as good an argument.

Now, to go back a bit, you must fancy again this young woman whom I have been talking about and who suddenly heard of a man whom once she had treated ill and whom after all—perhaps because she had treated him so ill—she had thought enough about to write a seathing note when she found him in a position impossible for her to think of in connection with a man whose character had seemed entirely different.

Then suddenly she heard that she was wrong and that he had been in this affair at San Fernandez as a spy, which is a career defensible in war and perhaps quite as necessary as that of the combatants who are engaged openly and who may hope for everything they may do to receive praise from their people, for the spy takes all the risk and the complete risk of an ignominious death, with little reward in view and the knowledge that his service perhaps never can be spoken of.

To Eleanor Chatwind the news which her stepfather sent came like a great shock. She had wronged this man as completely perhaps as she had wronged him before. She did not believe that he cared in the least degree whether she had or she had not. She had not this defense for her vanity. In fact, vanity, which is usually a dearer possession to women than to men, she put utterly aside, completely ignored it as if it had never existed, when she took that hasty, that impulsive, journey to San

"Tell him that I bribed the jailer."

Fernandez, and yet who among her friends or acquaintances would have held her a woman of the slightest impulse? But, as the proverb runs, never say your last word about any woman, although you may about any man.

She had gone to General Gonzales under that same impulse and had been refused, as you know, and then she had thought about the situation and what she could do. There is a saying—I have forgotten who coined it, but it is a rather old one—that the art of diplomacy should have been practiced by women, and it has been proved—how many times in France?—by those charming ladies who adroitly, cleverly, through the post of king's favorite, turned the destiny of a nation. Nor has it gone without good confirmation in Scotland and England, where more than once an intriguing woman has made treaties and policies.

How Miss Chatwind went at her affair is still a matter of some uncertainty, but she found exactly the friends and the intimates of the jailer. She went into a shabby little street—shabby even in San Fernandez—and met him. She found that he might be bribed and dared it, and he was bribed, as you know. He, I believe, did the rest, and there is the whole story told, which you have read in its other detail. And now there are more details, particular details, which will not quite be brought out here, but which I can tell from my own observation of the case, and you can think about them.

You must go back to New York, that most interesting and changing town, for though I believe there is London, it is London, and though I know my Paris as well as most men who have not been art students and do not know it too well, and though I know my Rome a bit and have loafed about there an Easter week and of miasmatic summers, know it from the Villa Borghese to the new American hotel; though I know my Monte Carlo and have gambled there and lost, and won, perhaps, experience; though I know all these places in a not too boastful way, I am free to confess after them all that New York is quite understandable.

Let us say in this digression that years ago it was provincial, but lately it has awakened, and the sheer force of the cosmopolitanism, of the many peoples gathered there from all the ends of the earth, the big and the little ends, has forced on it the potentiality of a great capital.

Lately I have begun to suspect that it has a bit of French in its temper, for I woke up in the morning and found a city which was my very own, whose only exciting recent battle hitherto had been over politics, say Tammany or its defeat, or over the comment excited by some millionaire or millionairess' ball—I woke up to find this same town all afire with a military fever which never had seemed possible. Well, a great city, a big aggregation of people, takes on in its entirety the characteristics of the individual, becomes, in fact, the composite individual. Oh, but let's stop philosophizing, because I have this story to end.

The main point of the story was that I went up to dinner at far Westchester at the Renews' If you are anybody, you ought to have been invited there some time or another, so I need not explain; if you are nobody, I do not want to explain. I was put near a tall, fair, interesting young woman whom I seemed to remember, and she, having the tact of women, remembered me, of course—or does that sound rather vain? But she remembered me. She was Miss Chatwind.

Far Westchester is one of those places developed by the growth of the consciousness among people of leisure of the value of country life, and there you can find good polo and golf to your pleasure and gossip by the smart set, horses to ride and women to flirt with up to the last dream of your desire in these essentials. I recalled in some way that little dinner at Van Brule's, and then directly in some way it became evident this was the girl, there being usually in every man's case some woman when he is past thirty, and I thought of Trilany.

Now, it happened that as I walked on the lawn I ran across her alone—and why should so entertaining a young woman be alone?—and I thought I was equal to her lack.

But she nonplused me. She took away my vanity, turning suddenly and saying:

"You are Lieutenant Trilany's friend?"

"Yes," said I. "He has been restored to his rank, I believe, and has been assigned to one of the new auxiliary cruisers."

"Do you know the story—why?" she asked.

I looked at her with some discretion, for the story was not known. It was said that Trilany, long in the service, had been employed as a spy by the government, and his restoration to an appointment had been due entirely to the government's consideration of what he could accomplish. No hint had so much as been given of the circumstance that the man had undertaken it by himself, without any encouragement save his own will to do. The government on its part had not mentioned it; Trilany on his own had not breathed it. He was restored; that was all.

I looked at her curiously there in the moonshine.

"Did he tell you?" she asked. "You know him very well."

I waited, considering my answer.

"Well, you know," I said at last, "we were good chums in the old days, and he told me."

I faced her.

"Ah, you know the story?"

"I know the story. I was down there then."

She hesitated and burst out:

"I wish you would tell him some time or other, you know him so well, though I don't care what he thinks about me. I wrote him the most abominable note once, not believing in him. I wish you would tell him that I bribed the jailer; that I contrived his escape."

And she paused, and a sob escaped her, and I wish you would know that when a woman sobs I am completely unmanned. If I dared to confess it, if a woman shed tears I would do anything for her—more than she wanted, doubtless—and many a man who has been armor proof has found himself defeated by a tear on the lash.

But with her the tears did not last, for she suddenly turned and her voice was dry and set, for she was angry enough, I can assure you, at herself, at me, for having heard her confession, and her voice was the voice of a little girl who is piqued.

"I hate you. No, I beg your pardon. I didn't mean to be so unconventional. What I meant to say was that I despise myself for saying what I didn't mean. It was all false."

And she ran into the house, and I failed because of her obstinacy to get near her the rest of that evening, and the next day the Renews' house party ceased. I bade my farewell to Mrs. Renew without seeing again that one of her guests who was most interesting to me, for I was wondering what she was driving at, and I decided to tell Trilany the story, happen what would.

You can see the ending of this, of course, the rules of sentimental stories being all the same. Women wish that which they cannot have, and men sometimes. Our convictions do not govern our impulses any more than our impulses our convictions.

He was sitting in the club, awaiting his orders, for he was fully reinstated in everybody's respect by this time, when I took him aside and told him of my experience at the Renews' as if it were simply no more than a bon mot, but I declare it was a deal more to him.

As for the sequel, let me tell you. There are times when you cannot help overhearing people's conversation. I sat in the corner somewhere, and I heard Mrs. Merryweather talking—could not help it—for as much as you may dislike to overhear conversation you must overhear Mrs. Merryweather's secretive communications, which are given in a loud, falsetto voice.

This is what she said:

"Have you heard?"

"Oh, yes! Isn't it extraordinary?"

Then said Mrs. Merryweather: "Oh, I don't know. It seems to me, from my experience, that girls who throw over men in the end usually get them."

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, October 6.—The cotton market opened at a decline of 1 to 22 points under active selling for both accounts which was promoted by lower cables than expected and lighter frosts in the southwest than had been feared. After selling off to a net decline of about 25 to 26 points, however, the market was rallied about 10 points by private cables reporting Liverpool 4 points higher on the curb nad subsequent fluctuations were irregular on trade of a week end character. Prices in the middle of the morning were about 20 to 22 points net lower. More or less rain was reported over the belt but precipitation was light as a rule. Futures closed barely steady.

Receipts at the ports today was 47,748 bales, against 47,747 last week, and 60,486 last year. For the week 375,000 bales, against 311,868 last week, and 347,362 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 5,350 bales, against 5,646 last year, and at Houston 14,863 bales, against 17,791 last year.

BELLS IN CHURCHES.

FIRST USED BY PAULINUS, BISHOP OF NOLA, ABOUT 400.

The Early British Christians Used Wooden Rattles to Call the People Together For Worship—Bells and Thunder and Lightning.

Church bells are of ancient origin. The ancients had bells for both sacred and profane purposes. Strabo says that market time was announced by their sound and Pliny that the tomb of an ancient king of Tuscany was hung round with bells. The hour of bathing was made known in ancient Rome by the sound of a bell. The night watchman carried one, and it served to call up the servants in great houses. Sheep had them tied about their necks to frighten away wolves, or, rather, by way of amulet.

Paulinus, bishop of Nola, is generally considered the first person who introduced bells into ecclesiastical service about the year 400. Historians say that in 610 the bishop of Orleans, being at Seno, then in a state of siege, frightened away the besieging army by ringing St. Stephen's church bells, which is a clear proof that they were not at that time generally known in France. The first large bells are mentioned by Bede in the year 680. Before that period the early British Christians made use of wooden rattles to call the congregation of the faithful together. Hand bells probably first appeared at religious processions and were afterward used by the seculars. The small bells were not always held in the hand. They were sometimes suspended upon a stake and struck with hammers.

The arrival of kings and great personages was anciently greeted by ringing the church bells. Ingulphus, abbot of Croyland, who died about 1100, speaks of them as being well known in his time and says that "the first abbot of Croyland gave six bells to that monastery—that is to say, two great ones, which he named Bartholomew and Beladine; two of a medium size, called Turketulium and Bettrine; two small ones, denominated Pega and Bega. He also caused the great bell to be made called Gudla, which was tuned to the other bell and produced an admirable harmony not to be equaled in England."

The bells used in the monasteries were sometimes rung with ropes having brass or silver rings at the ends for the hand. They were anciently rung by the priests themselves, afterward by the servants and sometimes by those incapable of other duties, as persons who were blind.

The doctrine of the Church of Rome concerning bells is that they have merit and pray God for the living and the dead; second, that they produce devotion in the hearts of the faithful. The dislike of evil spirits to bells is well expressed by Wynken de Worde in the "Golden Legend." The passing bell was anciently rung for two good purposes, one to bespeak the prayers of all good Christian people for a soul just departing and the other to drive away the evil spirits who stood at the foot of the bed or about the house. Such was the general opinion respecting the efficacy of bells before the reformation, but since that period "it has been the usual course in the Church of England that when any sick person lay dying a bell should toll to give notice to the neighbors that they might pray for the dying party, which was commonly called a passing bell, because the sick person was passing hence to another world, and when his breath was expired the bell rung out that the neighbors might cease their prayers, for that the party was dead." It is now only tolled after death.

The saint's bell was not so called from the name of the saint that was inscribed on it or of the church to which it belonged, but because it was always rung out when the priest came to that part of the service, "Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Domine Deus Sabbaoth," purposely that those persons who could not come to church might know in what a solemn office the congregation were at that instant engaged and so, even in their absence, be once, at least, moved to lift up their hearts to him who made them. Bells at one time were thought an effectual charm against lightning. The frequent firing of abbey churches by lightning confuted the proud motto commonly written on their bells in the steeples, wherein each entitled itself to a sixfold efficacy—viz:

Men's death I tell by doleful knell;
Lightning and thunder I break asunder;
On Sabbath all to church I call;
The sleepy head I raise from bed;
The winds so fierce I dost disperse;
Men's cruel rage I do assuage.

It has anciently been reported, observed Lord Bacon, and is still received that extreme applause and shouting of people assembled in multitudes have so rarefied and broken the air that birds flying over have fallen down, the air not being able to support them, and it is believed by some that great ringing of bells in populous cities has chased away thunder and also dissipated pestilent air.—New York Herald.

MICHAEL ANGELO.

The Humble Start In Life of the Famous Master.

Two boys were herding swine in Italy. They were evidently discussing some very important subject, for they were earnest at it. A man approached, and the boys separated, each for his own side of the pasture. The man was angry and was shaking his hand at them. The boys said nothing; they drove their swine in and were quiet as a mouse about it. The man had said they should stay out until dark, and the sun had not even set yet. After they had driven the swine to their respective places each crept to his room, took his clothes and tied them in a bundle. This done, they both crept down and ran to the road which led to Rome. One's name was Peter; the other Michael Angelo. Both were poor boys. They tramped and tramped, and the first thing they did when they reached Rome was to go to church. After they had rested and prayed they looked for employment. Peter received employment as the cook's boy in some cardinal's house, but Michael could find nothing to do, so he almost despaired.

He went to his friend Peter, who gave him something to eat and at night secretly let him into his room in the attic to sleep. This went on for a long time, Peter content to let his friend do this and Michael content also. Michael when in church had seen some fine pictures. One which fascinated him was "Christ Ascending to Heaven." Taking bits of charcoal, he went to Peter's room and drew pictures on the white walls. One day the cardinal had occasion to go to the room. Michael had meanwhile secured employment in the cardinal's kitchen. The cardinal, upon seeing all the pictures, was dumfounded with their accurateness. He called Peter and Michael upstairs and asked who had drawn them. Michael confessed he had, but said he thought he could rub them out again. The cardinal explained to him that it was all right so far as the wall was concerned. He took Michael and sent him to a drawing master and gave Peter a better position. And Michael worked hard at his drawings, learned diligently and became the renowned Michael Angelo, one of the greatest painters of his time.

VEGETABLES AS MEDICINE.

Asparagus stimulates the kidneys.

Water cress is an excellent blood purifier.

Parsnips possess the same virtues as sarsaparilla.

Carrots are good for those having a tendency to gout.

Celery contains sulphur and helps to ward off rheumatism.

Celery is a nerve tonic; onions also are a tonic for the nerves.

Tomatoes are good for a torpid liver, but should be avoided by gouty people.

Beets are fattening and good for people who want to put on flesh; so are potatoes.

Lettuce has a soothing effect on the nerves and is excellent for sufferers from insomnia.

Spinach has great aperient qualities and is far better than medicine for sufferers from constipation.

Hatching Eggs In the Mouth.

Some curious examples of the egg laying habits of certain frogs are related by naturalists. The female of one species, a species which was recently exhibited at a meeting of the Zoological society, carries the eggs about in her mouth until they are hatched. When the young emerge they are tadpoles, but fully formed, though, of course, diminutive frogs. An American tree frog, again, has a pouch along the whole extent of its back, in which the eggs are carried until hatched. It is the Nototrema marsupiatum of zoologists, the name referring to this curious habit. The case of the Surinam toad is equally curious. In this species the male places the eggs, one by one, in hollows in the loose skin on the back of the female, where they are developed.—London Globe.

Waiting to Be Found.

Lost one evening in a side street off Charing Cross, a small terrier came for the next six days at nightfall to the same spot, waiting to be "found" and scanning eagerly every passerby. The constable on the beat got to know her wistful little face and the bright silver collar she wore quite well, but she was never to be seen by daylight. It was only on the sixth evening, half starved and weak with waiting, that she allowed herself to be captured and taken to the dogs' home at Battersea, where she was eventually claimed by her owner.—St. James' Gazette.

Her Gift.

A Lancashire vicar was asked by the choir to call upon old Betty, who was deaf, but who insisted in joining in the solo of the anthem, and to ask her only to sing in the hymns. He shouted into her ear, "Betty, I've been requested to speak to you about your singing!" At last she caught the word "singing" and replied: "Not to me be the praise, sir. It's a 'gift.'"

Justice.

"Why is Justice represented with a bandage over her brow?"

"There is a classical reason for it," said the lawyer, "but to my mind it serves chiefly to impress the frequency with which Justice gets a black eye."—Washington Star.

MOBILE CITIZENS LYNCH NEGROES

Two Prisoners Taken From Sheriff on Train and Quietly Lynched.

MOB WORE WHITE MASKS

Victims Had Assaulted Several White Girls at Mobile and Lynching Was Will of the People—No Military Protection.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 8.—The crimes committed upon Ena May Fowler, Lillian May Savell, Ruth Sossaman, and attempts on others whose names are not given, were avenged by a party of 45 men this afternoon at 12:35 o'clock in a lonely place just off the Holt road in the neighborhood of Pritchard's station. The leaders ordered the men, who were all armed with revolvers, shot guns and rifles, not to fire a shot and the orders were carried out. Thompson, the negro youth, who committed the first crime that startled the people of Mobile and worked them up into a fury, was hanged first. Robinson, the other negro, was executed immediately afterward. A long half inch rope was thrown over the limb of a live oak tree and Robinson was drawn up about 15 feet and the rope was fastened. He slowly strangled to death. According to one of the leaders of the mob, Robinson confessed. The Associated Press representative was called over to hear the confession but Robinson looked frightened and said that he was not the man. Robinson was hanged at 12:38 P. M. Thompson was hanged before the body of Robinson was cut down.

The hanging of the negroes was conducted in a very quiet manner and during the time that the work was going on hardly a word was spoken. The negro Thompson was very sullen from the time he was taken off the train until the rope was placed around his neck. Robinson maintained that he was going to Heaven.

When Mount Vernon was reached on the trip from Birmingham, where the negroes had been sent from Mobile for safe keeping, eight men wearing white masks boarded the train.

Five of them leveled pistols at Sheriff Powers and his deputy and said the men had come for the prisoners. The revolvers of the sheriff and deputy were then taken from them. The conductor of the train was asked to move all the people in the first class coach to the rear seats as others of the crowd were going to get on at Plateau. The conductor complied with the request and some of the passengers were also placed in the sleeper. One of the mob leaders who stood on the platform of the train, heavily masked, said that the crowd which had just boarded the train were all business men of Mobile and that their action had been decided upon only after careful consideration.

He said that if the negroes were taken into Mobile by the sheriff and tried under military protection there would certainly be bloodshed and their method was the best. When the train reached Creole, 15 miles from Mobile, a large number of men wearing masks and one of them carrying a bag which contained straps and ropes, came on board and were given their orders. At Pritchard's Station the masked mob with the prisoners closely guarded got off the train and started down the road. The cry was given to "hurry" and the mob and prisoners broke into a run. After running 25 yards a big oak tree was reached and the mob stopped and ropes were produced. Fearing trouble with the neighborhood negroes, scouts armed with rifles guarded the main road. The negroes were then strung up. Nearly everybody in the crowd took part of the rope.

While the negroes were being hanged strict orders from the leader rang out "Boys, do not fire a shot, we are carrying out the will of the people."

As soon as the news reached the city that the two negroes had been taken away from the sheriff by a party of masked men, people began to flock to the scene of the hanging. Some left the city by conveyance, others walked, and some took the street cars to the nearest point and then walked through the woods to the trees where the negroes were dangling from the limbs.

Some of the more morbid began to gather souvenirs of the lynching in way of pieces of clothing, bark from the trees and pieces of the rope and brought them to the city.

About 4 o'clock some of the crowd suggested that a bon fire be built and the bodies cremated, but wiser judgment prevailed and a justice of the peace was called, and empanelling a jury, held an inquest over the bodies. The verdict was that they came to their death at the hands of persons unknown.

There was no disturbance in the city. By order of the sheriff, the bodies will be buried in Potter's field by the city later this afternoon.

No Troops Were Furnished.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 6.—A special from Montgomery says that Governor Jelks this afternoon made public the correspondence passing between himself and the sheriff and citizens of Mobile county in explanation of why the militia was not sent to Mobile with the negroes Thompson and Robinson, lynched near that city today. The Governor admits receiving a telegram from members of the Mobile bar last night asking that military be furnished and makes public the telegram he sent in reply stating that soldiers would be put on the train when it reached Montgomery. The correspondence shows that a telegram was sent to Birmingham last night ordering Sheriff Powers to bring the prisoners by way of Montgomery, but that this telegram was not delivered in time to reach the sheriff before he left for ernor makes the statement that he gomery.

SMALL RACE RIOT IN GEORGIA CITY

TAE JAIL WAS STORMED.

Panic Among Crowds at Amusement Place In Consequence of Trouble —Jail Attacked By Angry Whites.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Macon, Ga., Oct. 6.—About 10 tonight Charles Adams and William Solomon, prominent young white men, were shot by a negro and seriously wounded at the fair grounds where shows were giving night performances. The negro was arrested and a crowd is now attacking the jail where he is confinedd. The midway was thronged with hundreds of young people.

Adams and Solomon were escorting two young women when a negro, in a very offensive manner, forced his way between the couples, separating them. A remonstrance from the young men led to an encounter. The negro whipped out a revolver and opened fire on Adams and Solomon, both receiving wounds in the stomach. The negro was promptly arrested and placed in jail. A general stampede ensued among blacks and whites, as friends of the wounded men made threats of vengeance. Young women scrambled into cars and hacks and sought home at once. A mob of 200 soon formed and half of them went to the jail and the others to the barracks. The barracks were so well guarded that no effort was made to storm it and this contingent of enraged citizens joined at the jail which is now being stormed. It is said the outer door has been broken down. Strenuous efforts are being made to prevent violence, the mayor exercising all the power at his command to restore order.

During the excitement at the park, Pierce Bronson, a negro fired a 38-calibre at Luther Howard, colored, the ball passing through his heart. This last shooting was the result of a quarrel just before the tragedy at the park.

CAROLINA VS. PENNSYLVANIA.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Philadelphia, Pa., October 6.—On a wet field the University of Pennsylvania football team defeated the University of North Carolina today by the score of 11 to 0. It was a poor exhibition of football under the new rules. Throughout the entire game the Southerns made but one effort to advance the ball by line plays and this was an end-run in the second half, which lost them ground. On every other occasion they kicked on the first down.

The Pennsylvania eleven strengthened by Captain Green, who played his first game of the year, at right half back, relied for the most part on straight line plays, varied by an occasional use of the forward pass and the quarter-back kick. They carried the ball 220 yards in thirty eight line plunges. The quarter back kick was a good ground gainer for Pennsylvania.

FRENCHMAN WON VANDERBILT CUP

RAN MILE LESS THAN MINUTE

Winner Forced His Car 297.1 Miles in 290 Minutes 10 2-5 Seconds—Venturesome Spectator Killed. Large Number Injured.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New York, October 6.—France today won the third international automobile road race for the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., cup, completing a record of three straight victories in this event which is run over the turnpikes of Long Island, the center of the course being twenty miles from New York City. Italy was second in the race, France filled third and fourth positions, while Germany furnished the fifth car.

Only these five machines completed the tenth and last lap of the course which was 29.71 miles in length. The total distance of the race was 297.1 miles and Louis Wagner, driver of the winning car, made the distance in 290 minutes 10 2-5 seconds, a speed of more than a mile a minute for the entire distance.

One of the more than hundred thousand spectators who lined the course paid with his life the penalty of too great couriosity. He was near the dangerous turn in the course known as Krug's corner. Two cars had flashed by when the man ventured out upon the road to get a better view of the others coming. With the rush and roar of throbbing engines the French car driven by Elliot Shepard, an American, dashed into the man who in view of thousands, was hurled high into the air. When picked up many yards from the scene of the accident, the man was dead. His skull had been fractured, both his legs broken and he was frightfully crushed. After a few minutes he was identified as Kurt L. Gruner, of Passaic, N. J.

a Shepard plunged ahead at 90 miles an hour along the stretch leading to the judges' stand. He was completely unnerved, however, and did not finish his seventh lap. It was given out that he had broken a crankshaft. Shepard was running sixth and was in a contending position when the accident occurred.

Joseph Tracy, in his American car, crashed into a crowd of men and boys and seriously injured Sylvester Baldwin, a boy of Norwalk, Conn. Several others were slightly hurt. Tracy held to the course. Dr. Weilschott, an amatuer driver of an Italian car, lost control of his big 120-horse power machine on the very first round. He ran down two boys on a bicycle, then plunged down a thirty foot embankment. Both the driver and Colombe, his machanician, were picked up unconscious but were quickly revived. The injured boys are John Brooks and Robert Teneyck, both living near the course. Several persons were run down by touring cars in the crush going to and returning from the race.

The blare of the bugal and the cry of "car coming" had no effect upon the crowd. They had their positions on the course until the on-coming car was within 100 yards. Then like the opening of an inverted wedge the crowd gave way with reluctance, leaving barely enough room for the rushing car with its powerful engine spitting fire and flame and roaring like a battery of small calibre artillery, to dash through. One false motion of the hand clutching the steering gear and an accident like that of an express train crashing into 100 people would have resulted. The accidents that did occur were early in the race before the majority of spectators became so bold.

Tracy, of the American team, winner of the American elimination trails, was on his ninth round when stopped. He had the satisfaction of driving the fastest lap of the day, thereby establishing a new record for the course. He made his fifth circuit of the 29.71 miles in 26 minutes, 21 seconds. The drivers slowed down to 25 miles an hour and less in negotiating some of the turns. Then to bring their average up to sixty miles an hour notch it was necessary to pound along some of the straight stretches at ninety miles an hour and more.

The official grand stand was on one of these long stretches and as the cars roared their way through the cheering thousands they were reeling off their fastest miles.

Wagner, who held the lead from the very first round, came very near losing the race when twenty miles from the finish one of his tires exploding. He had a lead of some seven minutes at the time, changed tires and managed to win by approximately three minuteses. Lancia, Duray and Clement went through the race without mishap.

After this had lifted there was occasional rifts and bursts of sunshine, but the finish was in a drizzle. The inclement weather had no effect whatever on the crowd.
